25 Millions Steel Order, Night Shifts To Push Jobs

Ickes Moves to Spend All $3,200,000,000 Fund by January 1.

Work Allotments Will Be Hurried

President Plans to Buy Rails to Aid Mills and Railroads.

The Federal reflationary program moved forward yesterday along a broad front as three definite steps to put Government millions to work behind industrial and farm credit were taken by the administration.

Double shifts were ordered at the Public Works Administration, where "speed-up" instructions forecast allotment of the balance of the $3,200,000,000 public works fund before the first of the year.

From the White House came word that President Roosevelt, following extensive negotiations with steel leaders, would use $25,000,000 of public works money for the purchase of steel rails, with a dual objective—breaking the high price of rails and stimulating carrier business.

To Release "Frozen" Millions.

At the White House plans were in the making for releasing other millions from closed State and national banks, particularly in rural communities. This phase got off to an early start in Washington, where $8,000,000 was released by the new Hamilton National Bank.

Meanwhile, the farm drive for more direct inflation was brought close home to Washington. Headed by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, a delegation of farmers called on President Roosevelt, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Gov. Morgenthau of the Farm Credit Administration. They sought a cheaper dollar, as one means of bringing agriculture prices to parity with the industrial price advance.

Will Add Night Shift.

The Public Works Administration drive to speed up allotment of public works money and immediate use of that money on non-Federal projects, was announced by Administrator Ickes on his return from Chicago. A night shift to speed the program will be added.

Deputy Administrator H. M. Waite reported the longest single list of non-Federal projects to date will be submitted this week to the special board for public works for action.

Federal agencies, which have received the bulk of the $1,600,000,000 allotted to date, will be turned down in favor of non-Federal public works projects in the remaining disbursements, officials intimated.

Haste Is Urged.

Col. Waite warned non-Federal bodies not to be slow in applying for money "because Government agencies are clamoring for the remainder of the funds."

A 700,000-ton order for new steel rails was at stake at yesterday's

Ford Escapes NRA Inquiry

Compliance Board Named for Dearborn Can Not Probe Complaints.

Detroit, Sept. 25 (AP).—A local NRA compliance board was named today for suburban Dearborn, but the board has no authority to pass upon or discuss complaints lodged against the Ford Motor Co.

The membership of the board, chosen by the Dearborn NRA committee, does not include a representative of the Ford company or of its employes.

The committee had expected its board to consider complaints involving the Ford company, but was informed officially that its power is limited to firms operating under the President's reemployment agreement.

The activities of the board in connection with the Ford company will be limited to reporting any complaints to Washington for consideration there.

Copeland Robbed In Fight on Crime

Loses Trousers and $400; Borrows to Eat.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 25 (AP).—United States Senator Royal S. Copeland, New York, reported to police today he was robbed of $400 when a guest of an Erie hotel last night.

The senator stopped here on the way to a meeting of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee in Detroit. His secretary was robbed of $65.

Both had to borrow funds for breakfast. Hotel officials said the robber entered an ante room in the senator's suite, carried off his trousers and rifled them.

In Hospital

Johnson Under Knife; Code Delay Is Feared

Administrator Undergoes Infection Operation at Walter Reed.

Fear that illness of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, may slow up the recovery campaign was expressed yesterday as it became known the administrator was in Walter Reed Hospital, recuperating from an operation for an infection.

Gen. Johnson entered the hospital Saturday, following several days' confinement at his home in the Wardman Park Hotel. His physicians hoped a period of rest would clear up the infection, but decided to operate.

The administrator said he expects to return to his office tomorrow or next day, but administration officials, familiar with the pace he has maintained, fear his vitality may have been lowered and complications develop.

Gen. Johnson was said to have carried on his work at home and in the hospital. The most important pending question is the code for retailers.

Gen. Johnson is said to be dissatisfied with the codes as drafted by Arthur D. Whiteside, deputy administrator, with whom he conferred yesterday. He was to discuss the codes with other assistants today.

Many other questions are awaiting return of the administrator. One of these is the "buy now" campaign to be launched soon. October 1 has been tentatively fixed for its start.

Differences between representatives of industry and labor in the NRA continue, and Gen. Johnson plans to take some action after he returns to his desk. He has been displeased by the battle of statements between members of the industrial and labor advisory boards.

Fist Fight Marks Lamson Hearing

Attorneys Become Enraged Over Perjury Charge.

San Jose, Calif., Sept. 25 (AP).—A fist fight between Edwin M. Rea, chief defence counsel for David A. Lamson, convicted of murdering his wife, Allene Thorpe Lamson, and Assistant District Attorney Allan P. Lindsay, closed today's court session as Lamson's counsel sought to obtain a new trial for the University Press executive.

During the session four affidavits, one by a juror and three by sheriff's officers, were presented by the State to counteract charges by defense attorneys that Lamson's conviction was attended by irregularities of officials and jurors.

First Lady to Aid Salvation Army Drive

Boston, Sept. 25 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt came to Boston today to participate tomorrow in the opening of a drive for funds by the Salvation Army.

She came a day ahead of time to visit her sons, James, and Franklin, jr., a student at Harvard.

She also planned to go to Groton School to see another son, John.

Repeal Convention In Vermont Today

Herriot Improves; Able To Resume Work Soon

Lyons, France, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Former Premier Edouard Herriot was improved today, his physicians declared. He was reported suffering from a slight attack of uremia complicated by tonsilitis, and running a fever.

A doctor's bulletin said Herriot should be able to resume activities in a week.

Crowds See Bandits Slug Victim, Flee With $4,000

Fires at Pursuers, Gives Up to Officer

Store Official Attacked by Pair at Fifteenth, New York Avenue.

Loot of $4,000 was recovered and two gunmen were under arrest early today, less than six hours after Maurice J. Morrison, assistant manager of the Murphy 5 and 10 cent store, was slugged and robbed in front of the American Security & Trust Co.

Maurice Shelton, 24, of Brookmont, Md., was captured at gunpoint by a park policeman a few minutes after the holdup. His alleged companion, who escaped in a taxi, was apprehended shortly before 2 a. m. today. He said he was Muray Webel Ziegler, 28, of East Orange, N. J.

The money was recovered in a hideaway.

Fires at Pursuers.

As several men closed in on one of the bandits, he turned his pistol on them, firing as he dodged into a doorway of the Shoreham Building, Fifteenth and H streets northwest. His companion, who apparently had the money, leaped into a taxicab and forced the driver to speed away.

Morrison told police he was preparing to deposit the currency in a night depository of the trust company. As he crossed the street, Morrison said, he noticed a Yellow Taxi parked at the curb.

He walked in front of the cab, Morrison said, and stepped to the pavement. The two men were in the driver's seat and opened the doors as he approached.

Battle on Sidewalk.

What happened in the following moments Morrison described as a "nightmare." In full view of passersby, one of the men grabbed him around the neck. The other, he

Four Arrested In Price Killing

Real Story Behind Death of Rail Official Sought.

Waynesville, N. C., Sept. 25 (AP). With four persons in jail, Sheriff J. A. Lowe tonight sought the real story behind the slaying of Thomas Price, 65, secretary of the Union Pacific Railroad.

Virge Williams and Charlie Buchanan, wounded at the same time, said Dewey Potter, caretaker at an abandoned mine, fired before they could heed his warning to turn around.

Potter, though making no statement, indicated he would plead self-defense.

In jail with Potter were his three companions. They are his brother, Clarence, 35; his son, Wayne, 14, and Eric Ledford, 22.

White House Deaf to N. Y. Mayor Fight

Anti-Tammany Friends of President Get Cool Reception Here.

By Elliott Thurston.

One of the modern political dramas neared a climax yesterday at the White House, producing silence on the part of President Roosevelt and Postmaster General "Big Jim" Farley, whose ostensible ambitions to smash Tammany Hall in the forthcoming New York mayoralty fight have reached acute embarrassment.

While Joseph V. McKee, who inherited the mayoralty upon the abdication of James J. Walker, wavered on the sidelines for word from Washington that would send him into the fray against Tammany's mayor, John P. O'Brien, and fusion candidate, Fiorello H. LaGuardia, erstwhile insurgent Republican, a paralyzing silence fell upon the White House and upon Mr. Farley.

The first episode came when Langdon W. Post, original Roosevelt and anti-Tammanyite, and Chief Justice Frederic Kernochan, of the New York Court of Special Sessions, also a Tammany rebel, arrived at the White House to see the President. They are among his most intimate friends and backers. But they did not get in to see him. They were permitted a glimpse of White House Secretaries Col. Louis McHenry Howe and Col. Stephen Early.

Could Not Talk.

Instead, Col. Early staged an interesting scene. He summoned the newspapermen, introduced the Messrs. Post and Kernochan and explained, with what seemed to be elaborate emphasis, that they had come down from Gotham to talk to the President about the mayoralty, and that, of course, the President could not discuss such a subject—even with old friends.

Episode No. 2 was Mr. Farley's arrival in town after a New York visit which left a trail of evidence that he had given his blessing to the McKee candidacy. He was silent, even declining a comment on the weather. The nearest he came to uttering a syllable was when he was shown New York reports quoting Mr. Post as saying that he, Mr. Farley, political mentor of the Roosevelt Administration, believed Mr. McKee would run for mayor.

These reports seemed to set up a violent emotion, implying that Mr. Post had spoken out of turn.

All this rather odd political behavior has a deep meaning. That

Hunter's Hand Torn Off When Fall Fires Shotgun

Accidental discharge of a shotgun yesterday tore off the left hand of Donald McDonald, 25, who was hunting hawks near his home at Wildercroft, Md.

McDonald said the gun fired when he stumbled over a log. He summoned aid from his home and was removed to Providence Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad.

Joy Rules 100,000 Depositors As Hamilton Frees $8,000,000

Confidence Is Shown by Absence of Rush to Withdraw.

With broad smiles, congratulations and handshaking, amid the fragrance of scores of floral tributes, several thousand of the 100,000 depositors of the new Hamilton National Bank thronged its headquarters and seven branches yesterday for a day of brisk banking operations denied to most of them for more than half a year.

When the headquarters of the new institution, at Fourteenth and G streets northwest, opened its doors, the setting needed only a string orchestra and sherbet to give it all the tone of a diplomatic reception.

There was no early rush of withdrawals, to the frank surprise of officials, and while all the bank's branches, gay with bright baskets of flowers, were crowded throughout the day, President Edwin C. Graham and other officers beamed with satisfaction when the first day's business closed.

Pointing out that preliminary figures might be misleading, and professing gratification at the public's response to the bank's opening, President Graham declined to state whether the $8,000,000 available to depositors had been increased or decreased by the day's transactions.

It was apparent that withdrawals far exceeded deposits, numerically if not in quantity, but at no time during the day was there any rush upon the paying tellers.

With $2,500,000 in cash, the bank's clerical force assembled for duty at 6:30 a. m. Most of them had been employes of the eight restricted banks now forming the Hamilton National.

Many Felicitate Bank Officials at Opening of Institution.

By 8 o'clock, half an hour before the advertised time for opening, depositors were drifting in slowly, some diffidently, some obviously surprised to find no line-up at the outer doors. Before 8:30 a. m. about 50 withdrawals had been made, mostly by women, many clutching flat pocketbooks, a doubting expression on their faces changing to smiles as they exchanged counter checks for currency.

With the opening of the florist shops came a stream of messenger

Price-Raising Code for Milk To Be Fought

Independent Distributors in Washington Area Organize.

Independent milk distributors of the Washington area have organized to fight a price-raising marketing agreement being drafted by producers and large distributors for submission to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The proposed agreement is understood to provide a 3-cent-a-gallon increase to the farmer for milk to be used in bottle form and a 2-cent-a-gallon boost for milk sold for cream making.

This increase, independent distributors warn, will necessitate a 1-cent-per-quart increase to the consumer. The retail price is now 13 cents a quart, which is 2.9 cents higher than the average price in the Nation.

The independents met yesterday in the offices of Sefton Darr, attorney for the Alderney-Green Meadows Fairfax Farms Dairies, and formed a permanent organization. Dairies represented distribute 33 per cent of the milk sold by other than National Dairy Products Corporation affiliates. Independents distribute 40 per cent of the milk supply.

John A. McGill, secretary of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, said last night the agreement is being drafted, but it is not ready for submission.

Conferences on the agreement are being held between large distributors and producers' representatives. Only certain distributors have been invited.

The following dairies received no invitations; Alderney-Green Meadows-Fairfax Farms, Wakefield, Arlington County, and Model Farms.

Taking part in the discussions, it is understood, were: Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairies, Thompson Dairies, and the Walker-

Touhy Loses Plea For Lower Bail

Guns Guard U. S. Judges in St. Paul Jail.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 25 (AP).—Separate trials and bail reductions were denied Roger Touhy and three other alleged kidnapers today by two Federal judges who sat in a machine-gun-guarded courtroom.

Judges J. W. Molyneaux and M. M. Joyce ordered the bail to remain at $100,000 for each of the Chicago gang figures held for the kidnaping last June of William Hamm and denied other defense motions.

The defendants are Ed McFadden, Willie Sharkey, Gus Scaefer and Touhy.

Other defense motions denied asked that Federal charges be set forth more clearly and that certain evidence relating to guns, ammunition and money be suppressed.

The trial of the four is scheduled for November. Hamm, millionaire brewer, was released after payment of $100,000 ransom.

One Pleads Guilty In Bailey Escape

Omaha, Sept. 25 (AP).—John A. Walker, of Bemus Point, N. Y., whose father surrendered him here to save the family home, was given a five-year parole by Federal District Judge James Donohoe today.

Walker's father, Ernest, posted a $1,000 cash bond for his son on a charge of forging a Government check. Ten days ago he delivered his son to officers to claim the bond money to pay off a mortgage.

The son said he obtained a position as gardener.

League Hears Of War Perils

Warning From Norwegian Premier Spurs Move to Enforce Peace.

Geneva, Sept. 25 (AP). — Fifteen years after "that fratricidal crime, the Great War," the world still faces the menace of war, Premier Johan Mowinckel, of Norway, declared today when, as president of the council, he opened the sessions of the League of Nations assembly.

His solemn warning spurred activity among the world statesmen gathered here to advance the cause of peace. Of first importance were efforts to bridge the chasm between France and the new Germany of Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

Norman H. Davis, United States disarmament negotiator, had dinner tonight with Baron Konstantin von Neurath, German foreign minister. Mr. Davis continued the work of Franco-German mediation already started by Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary.

Dr. Mowinckel's warning of the menace of war, coupled with the negotiations to achieve concrete results in disarmament by composing the differences between France and Germany, dwarfed for the time being the issue of Germany's treatment of the Jews.

Gale Sinks Fish Ship, Crew of 16 Escapes

St. Johns, Newfoundland, Sept. 25 (AP).—Caught in a storm off the fishing banks of Labrador, the schooner Ettie Bess, owned by Strong, Ltd., of Little Bay, Newfoundland, foundered near Dark Tickle, Labrador, company officials were advised today. The crew of 16 escaped in the boats.

The vessel was laden with fish.

Gold Clause Held Valid in Contract

Los Angeles, Sept. 25 (AP).—Holding the President and Congress had acted contrary to prior decisions of the United States Supreme Court, the Superior Court refused today to set aside the gold clause in a private contract.

Scion of Rich Boston Family Seeks Divorce

Reno, Nev., Sept. 25 (AP).—Francis Lee Higginson, jr., of a wealthy Boston family, sued today for a divorce from Dorothy Lucas Higginson, whom he married at Blundell-Sands, England, October 10, 1928.

Higginson charged cruelty, and said his wife is residing in Boston.

Urschel Guard Bares Threat Of Kidnapers

Forced to Aid in Fear of Life, Says Texas Farmer on Stand.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 25 (AP).—R. G. (Bos) Shannon, elderly Texas farmer, turned on two of his co-defendants in the Charles F. Urschel kidnaping trial here today and testified he and his family were forced to hold the oil man captive on their farm under threat of death.

Seeking to clear himself, his wife, Ora, and his son, Armon, Shannon related a story of alleged coercion by the kidnapers.

He testified that Harvey Bailey, outlaw and alleged head of the abduction conspiracy, captured on the Shannon farm in Wise County, Tex., had been there with George Kelly and Albert Bates while Urschel was held prisoner.

Forced to Keep Guard.

Kelly, the absent machine gunner who is the object of a Nation-wide search, and Bates, now on trial, forced him and his son, Armon, to guard Urschel while the two went to collect the oil man's ransom of $200,000, Shannon testified.

Shannon testified Bailey came to the farm Tuesday after Urschel was brought there Sunday.

"Later," Shannon related, "when Kelly and Bates had gone to get the money, Bailey came back and said he was looking for Bates and Kelly.

"When I told him they were not there he said he would 'just stay around a few days.' I felt he had been sent to watch us and see that we kept Mr. Urschel prisoner."

Defendant Freed.

Previously, Shannon testified, Kelly had threatened to kill him and his son, Armon, if they "turned on any heat."

Shannon denied knowing of any prearranged plan to kidnap Urschel.

Judge Edgar S. Vaught narrowed the list of defendants from St. Paul and Minneapolis to five by ordering Peter Valder released, on lack of evidence.

Flood Sweeps 70-Mile Area; Trains Lost

(United Press.)

A terrific hurricane wrecked the city of Tampico, on the Gulf of Mexico, yesterday, spreading death and destruction over hundreds of miles.

One estimate placed dead and injured as high as 5,000 persons. Martial law in the stricken area was proclaimed.

The damage to property by wind and floods was described as "fabulous." Communications were down and details meager.

Railway officials were quoted as estimating 5,000 dead and injured in the district between Victoria and Tampico. The wind roared inland at 125 miles an hour, some reports said.

Miles of railway tracks were washed away.

Unimaginable Tragedy.

First contact with the stricken city was obtained through communication with the German steamer Kiel in Tampico Harbor, which radioed:

"Most immense tragedy. Impossible to imagine extent. Those parts of city not destroyed by wind are now 10 or 15 feet under water."

Inland from Tampico for a distance of at least 70 miles the country apparently had been flooded.

The National Railways reported that several trains which left Mexico City for Tampico the day before the hurricane struck have not been heard from since they reached a point about 30 miles from the ravaged city. It is feared that they were wrecked.

Medicine Sent By Air.

Government officials estimated that it will be 36 hours before planes can reach Tampico, and eight days before trains can get through. They planned, however, to dispatch as many planes as possible today to drop medicine.

Gen. Matias, military chief of the Tampico district, immediately engaged all his available troops in rescue and relief work.

All Trees Blown Down.

F. J. Nolan, Pan-American Airways pilot, who made an aerial survey of the city, said he had

Writer, Long in Ill Health, First Won Fame With "You Know Me, Al."

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Ring Lardner, noted writer-humorist, died tonight at his home in East Hampton, Long Island, following a long illness.

Lardner, who was 48 years old, died at 11 p. m.

Although he had been in ill health since a general breakdown early in 1931, he had been a regular contributor to a weekly magazine in recent months.

One of his physicians said that he finally was permitted use of his typewriter "because he isn't happy unless he's working." Lardner, however, was forced by his physicians to remain away from the city.

Born in Niles, Mich., Lardner became celebrated first for the keen wit he displayed as a Chicago sports writer and later as an author of ballads, plays and skits.

Perhaps his best known work was "You Know Me, Al," a collection of humorous letters written by a young baseball player starting in the major leagues.

Col. Turner Breaks Record Flying Continent Eastward

10 Hours and 5½ Minutes Beats Time Made by Haizlip.

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Col. Roscoe Turner flew from California today in 10 hours and 5½ minutes, a west-east continental record.

"Well," said Turner when he climbed out of his plane at Floyd Bennett Field at 11:43½ a. m., "it took me five years to do it. I tried to break the record five times, and now I've gone and done it."

He ran to his wife and hugged her.

"Boy," said she between hugs, "that's great. You broke the record by about 14 minutes."

The bronzed colonel now holds records for both ways across the country. He already held the east-west record of 11 hours and 30 minutes.

He was so thrilled when he landed he talked rapidly, in contrast to his usual drawl. He averaged 275 miles an hour from the Coast, he said, and at times his bullet-shaped plane made 315 miles an hour.

There is a bit of drama in Turner beating Haizlip's record. Both are from the same section of Mississippi, not far from the Arkansas home of Eddie Stinson. Both began flying at an early age. Turner taught aviation during the war.

He and Haislip have been close friends for years.

Plan for Rum Rule Here Seen As U. S. Model

Lusk, Crusader Official, Who Drew D. C. Beer Measure, Is Author.

A comprehensive plan for liquor control in the District of Columbia following repeal of the eighteenth amendment, which probably will prove the model for the law regulating the manufacture, sale and distribution of intoxicating liquor here, was submitted in outline yesterday to Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and to Corporation Counsel William W. Bride.

The author is Rufus S. Lusk, vice executive commander of the Crusaders for the last two years, who drew up the present beer bill under which Washington quaffs its 3.2.

Stirred by how little has been done here to prepare for the arrival of repeal, Mr. Lusk, although confined to bed at his Georgetown residence for several weeks, completed yesterday the outline of his liquor bill and forwarded it to those charged with arranging for its submission to Congress.

Sees Damnedest Fight Ever.

Crippled with rheumatism, but still the fiery enthusiast who designed the famous "Speak-Easy Map of Washington" and whipped the Crusaders into the van of the fight for repeal, the sandy-haired war veteran and lawyer admitted yesterday he expects "the damnedest fight ever" before his bill, or something approximating it, is adopted.

The plan submitted yesterday is designed primarily, Mr. Lusk said, to cure the evils of the liquor traffic by taking away the profits of that traffic.

"The essence of my plan is to take away the profit, so it will not be worth anyone's while to push the sale of liquor," he explained.

"There would be no traffic in narcotics, if there were no profits.

The Lusk plan includes the appointment of a three-man commission, to have absolute control over the sale, manufacture and distribution of all beverages containing more than 3.2 per cent alcohol.

Best Men For Commission.

"It is essential that we obtain appointment by the President of the best men available," said Mr. Lusk. "I would have the chairman of the commission paid $9,000 a year, and the others $7,500. None of them should be a dry."

Under the Lusk plan, the commission would give a franchise to a limited dividend corporation, which would pay 7½ per cent on its stock. All other profits would go to the city, and Mr. Lusk would have $50,000 of these profits set aside each year for the teaching of "true temperance."

The corporation would be under absolute control of the liquor commission, as is the case in the Bratt system, functioning effectively in Sweden.

"A limited number of retail stores, say 150, would be opened by the corporation throughout the District," said Mr. Lusk. "The location of these stores would have to be approved by the commission.

Sold in Original Packages.

"The stores would sell liquor only in the original packages. They would handle every known kind of liquor that can be sold at a profit. The kind of liquor would vary, according to districts. In some, on Connecticut avenue, for example, there would be a demand for champagnes and wines of superior vintage; stores on the south side would carry whatever the patrons in their districts required.

All liquors, wines and beer of more than 3.2 per cent would be tested and stamped by the commission, which would guarantee the contents of every package. There would be no limit as to the amount that might be purchased by an individual, but resale would be prohibited.

Licenses Would Cost $1,500.

"Under my plan, the commission would license bona fide hotels, restaurants and clubs, permitting the sale and consumption of liquor on the premises," Mr. Lusk added. "I would fix a license fee of $1,500 for each hotel and restaurant.

"The commission would fix the price of bottled goods sold for consumption in hotels, restaurants and clubs, as well as for highballs and mixed drinks."

No bars would be permitted.

"There is," Mr. Lusk here interposed, parenthetically, "going to be the damnedest fight ever on this point."

It would be illegal, under the plan, for hotels to sell bottled goods for consumption off the premises.

In line with his proposal to "take the profit out of the liquor traffic," Mr. Lusk here proposed a sliding scale of quantity permitted to hotels, clubs and restaurants each month.

Eventually no Profit.

"Say, for example, a hotel was allowed 1,000 gallons of liquor a month," he suggested. "It would get this amount at a price permitting a reasonable profit.

"If, and when this was all used up, the hotel could obtain another 1,000 gallons from the corporation, but at a higher price, which would permit less profit, the price to the consumer remaining always the same. On a third 1,000 gallons the hotel would be allowed no profit whatever.

"This would mean hotels, clubs and restaurants wouldn't push the sale of liquor."

Beer of alcoholic content of not more than 3.2 per cent would be sold, under the Lusk plan, as at present, but under commission control. Heavier beer and ale would be sold only in corporation stores, hotels or restaurants, but there would be no limit as to the amount.

Wine would be allotted to hotels, clubs and restaurants more freely than hard liquors.

"I'm trying to encourage people to drink like civilized beings, but not drive them to it," said Mr. Lusk.

Before prohibition came to Washington, in March, 1917, the annual income from liquor was $550,000.

Mr. Lusk estimates the revenue from his plan at $1,500,000. In 1932 the District's intangible tax amounted to $1,733,000.

And, in case the courts decide that Corporation Counsel Bride is right, that the Volstead act is in force in the District after the thirty-sixth State has voted for repeal, there will be a clause to repeal that act in Mr. Lusk's bill.

High Liquor Tax Studied,

(Associated Press.)

Experts of the joint Congressional Internal Revenue Committee have been instructed to give close study to a proposed tax of $2 to $3 a gallon on 100 proof whisky with a view to congressional consideration at the January session if prohibition is repealed.

The study is in conjunction with the recent order of President Roosevelt for the Treasury to prepare to recommend new liquor revenue rates to Congress.

In the event of repeal, administration leaders hope to get a special bill through Congress early in January so the Treasury may get higher rates than $1.10 a gallon that otherwise would be effective after repeal.

Foreign Bond Buyers in New Recoup Move

Council Is to Be Formed by Group Which Lost on Securities.

(United Press.)

New efforts by American bondholders to recoup part of their losses on foreign securities, it was learned last night, is to be made soon under direction of a council of foreign bondholders.

American investments in foreign securities total about $8,000,000,000, of which a large amount of both principal and interest is in default, according to reliable estimates. Germany and Latin America hold a large part of these investments.

The setting up of a bondholder committee under Government auspices was provided in section II of the recent securities act. It was to function under direction of the Federal Trade Commission.

Various private plans for a similar committee have been discussed 18 months. In April, 1932, financiers and economists met with State Department officials to consider such an organization. Nothing came of this effort at the time, but the discussions among New York bankers and economists of the basic idea have continued.

Official sources would not reveal last night whether the proposed bondholders' council would be organized by the Government or by private interests, but, it was established, the committee will have the cooperation of the administration.

Coal Mining Study Arranged for 1,000

17 Courses Offered by West Virginia U.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.).—Night classes in coal mining extension will be conducted this year by West Virginia University and the State Department of Mines, it is announced by C. E. Lawall, director of the University School of Mines.

About 1,000 miners are expected to take the work, which will lead to mine formen's and pit bosses' certificates. Seventeen courses will be offered and it is planned to hold about forty-five classes a week in cities of the State, including Morgantown.

Since the courses were started in 1914, more than 21,000 miners have been trained.

boys with huge baskets of flowers, accompanied by the good wishes of other banks and business houses. Soon the lobby at headquarters resembled a vast floral conservatory, while the customary hush of such a financial institution was broken by backslapping and shouts of "Congratulations!"

U. S. Officials Call.

Deputy Comptroller of the Currency Lloyd G. Awalt and Maj. W. Irving Shuman, of the Treasury Department, called to greet President Graham and the other officers, posing with them waist deep in the mass of floral tributes.

Uniformed police, pistol experts and plain clothes men were on duty, but they were not needed.

"We have every reason to be very happy," President Graham said, as the last depositor and visitor departed. "Withdrawals simply presage beginning of an active fall business.

"The money will be taken to the city's merchants, and our share will come back to us eventually."

Seated at his desk, on which was a bright bouquet tagged, "From Mother and the Kids," the affable president of the new bank smiled wearily but happily as he expressed satisfaction over conditions in the institution.

"With a capital of $1,250,000.00," he said, "the Hamilton National Bank enjoys the unusual position of having virtually no liabilities beyond its deposits.

"In respect to assets, the Hamilton is a particularly model example. We are unencumbered by loans or real estate. All assets taken over by the bank consist of cash, Government bonds, listed bonds at Saturday's selling prices, and loans on which schedules are checked to date by the U. S. Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board. The Hamilton has not borrowed a dollar from the R. F. C. or any other source."

Five Air Lines Raise Pilots' Rate of Pay

Step to Bring Peace in Recent Wage Dispute Announced.

Answering criticisms leveled at them during the trade code hearings on the aviation industry and in an effort to settle recent wage disputes, five major air line operators yesterday announced an advanced pay scale and schedule of working conditions for pilots.

The new scale, according to the operators, provides an average annual income of approximately $7,000 for an average 18-hour week, or $7,700 for an average 21-hour week.

The five lines involved are American Airways, Eastern Air Transport, Transcontinental and Western Air, United Air Lines, and Western Air Express.

Under the new scale pilots will receive approximately $7.50 an hour. It gives increased pay to approximately 250 out of a total of 375 pilots employed by the five air lines company, officials stated last night.

The guaranteed base pay, under the new management, paid irrespective of the number of hours flown, ranges from $1,600 annually for the first year to a maximum of $3,000. It is increased $200 annually.

In addition the pilots will receive hourly pay which is computed on the number of hours they fly each month. To compensate the pilots for flying more miles as faster planes are developed this pay is graduated upward according to a graduated scale between $4 and $4.80 per hour, depending on the speed of the plane. A bonus of $2 an hour is given for each hour of night flying.

$25,000,000 Steel Purchase Speeds Recovery Efforts

White House conference with steel leaders. Sitting with the President was Federal Rail Coordinator Joseph B. Eastman and Donald R. Richberg, general counsel for the NRA; Myron Taylor, representing United States Steel; Arthur Roeder, receiver for the Colorado Iron and Fuel Co.; L. E. Block, of Inland Steel, and Eugene Grace, of Bethlehem, spoke for the steel industry.

The plan evolved would permit $25,000,000 in public works loans to the railroads, for the purchase of rails. Interested steel companies, now low on orders, would bid competitively for the business. The President is understood to have made it clear that bids must be low. All will be closely scanned by the administration before the loans are made available.

The administration for some time has expressed dissatisfaction with the high price of steel rails, which have remained almost constant, despite sharp fluctuations in other steel prices. An Interstate Commerce Commission report on rail prices is now in the hands of the Attorney General.

Preliminary to yesterday's conference, Coordinator Eastman had collaborated with the railroads on a survey of their rail needs, said to range between 600,000 and 700,000 tons.

It was clear that an understanding had been reached when the steel captains left the White House.

"We are out for orders, and we are prepared to bid on any business that is offered us," was Mr. Taylor's only comment, however.

Want "Honest" Dollar.

Members of the farm delegation headed by O'Neal said they sought a dollar valued at 1926 buying power. They said they wanted it to be an "honest" dollar, so those who have loaned money will be paid back generally in the kind of money they loaned. Further, they voiced a determination to "stick right here" until they get it.

Represented in the delegation was the National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, the Farmers National Grain Corporation, the National Live Stock Marketing Association, the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation and editors of several agricultural publications.

Billion Added to Income.

While the farmers were moving between Government bureaus, Frederick C. Howe, consumers counsel of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, announced that $1,000,000,000 has been added to gross farm income since last February. He predicted crop reduction moves and exportation of surpluses will add thousands more by spring.

Administration plans to use the strength of Federal agencies to aid the flow of deposits from closed banks, discussed at Sunday's White House conference, were fast taking shape with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Farm Credit and Home Loan Corporations and the Federal Deposit Guaranty Corporation all figuring in the discussions. Each will render whatever assistance it may within the law.

Other Recovery Plans.

A plethora of other plans to hurry up recovery were put forward from other quarters. Senator King (Democrat), Utah, bimetallic enthusiast, urged stabilization of currency on a gold and silver basis.

Meantime, an encouraging picture of progress made in rehabilitation of the Nation's banking structure, was before President Roosevelt, as an outgrowth of Sunday's significant conference.

Roughly, it was estimated that $398,134,000 in deposits frozen in 265 banks was turned loose during the last six weeks, and 129 closed institutions reopened. As soon as necessary additions to capital are made, $90 more, whose reorganization plans have been approved, will be permitted to open.

14,080 Banks Unrestricted.

A total of 14,080 banks are said to be operating on an unrestricted basis at the present time with $31,930,275,000 in deposits, while 2,575 holding deposits estimated at $1,785,669,000 are still unlicensed.

Yesterday's Federal Reserve Board statement indicated a slowing up in the speed credit is moving to industry.

Plans Studied To Push U. S. Relief Work

Creation of Nonprofit Group for $75,000,000 Fund Proposed.

Formation of a nonprofit corporation under District laws to handle the Government's $75,000,000 food and clothing relief plan was being considered last night.

Maj. Robert M. Littlejohn, named to handle the plan to feed and clothe the Nation's needy from farm surpluses, indicated formation of a corporation would depend on the extent of open market purchasing necessary. Meanwhile, surveys were started to determine the amount of farm products that can be absorbed by distribution to the needy.

Harry Hopkins, director of the Federal relief organization, said "we can use a lot." He said he was trying to ascertain accurately the potential consumption of unemployed and others on relief rolls.

Farm administrators sought to establish what farm surpluses are most troublesome, and which can be most readily acquired and distributed.

Maj. Littlejohn's purchases may be limited to farmers who join in production curtailment if the two plans are joined.

One plan, described as "dumping within the Nation's boundaries," called for purchasing surpluses, including fruits and dairy products, from producers' organizations at less than open market prices. This would relieve markets of threats of oversupply, and make use of products which otherwise might go to waste.

Administrators said they wished to make Maj. Littlejohn's program support farm prices effectively. A belief that the $75,000,000 would be merely a minimum was expressed.

Possibility that RFC funds would be available for the surplus-relief program was expressed by officials.

"It is a frank avowal," Secretary Wallace said, "that we do not propose any longer to see millions of persons inadequately clothed and fed while surpluses are begging for a market."

Mill Supply Men To Discuss Code

Three Organizations Unite to Adopt NRA Ethics.

Five hundred manufacturers and distributors of mill supplies met yesterday at the first session of their annual convention, at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Three organizations are participating in the three-day convention—Southern Supply and Machinery Distributors Association, National Supply and Machinery Distributors Association and American Supply and Machinery Manufacturers Association.

Malcolm Muir, deputy administrator of NRA and president of McGraw-Hull Publishing Co., will speak today at 10 a. m. His subject will be "The effects and changes NRA regulation will have on merchandising methods of industrial sellers."

A public hearing on a code of fair competition for distributors of mill supplies will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. Maximum hours, minimum wages and regulation of competitive practices will be discussed.

Hill Dairy. These dairies distribute about 60 per cent of the milk supply. The Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase is owned outright by National Dairies. This dairy also holds a $200,000 note of the Walker-Hill Dairy. There is no connection between the Thompson firm and National Dairies.

Before a marketing agreement may become effective it must be approved by 75 per cent of both the producers and distributors. The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association markets 90 per cent of the milk supply.

Officers chosen yesterday by the Independent Milk Distributors Association are: President, Robert L. Dickson, of the Alderney-Green Meadows-Fairfax Farms; vice presidents, Michael H. Burchell, of the Alexandria Dairy Products Corporation, and Murray T. Ball, a producer-distributor of Landover, Md.; secretary, Aubrey Simpson, of the Wakefield Dairy, and treasurer, F. H. Harbey, of the Harbey Dairy, of Hyattsville, Md.

Because of the illness of Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou, it was impossible for him to be questioned yesterday by Elwood H. Seal, special counsel to the Senate Milk Investigating Committee. Seal desires to learn of the method of distributing milk consumption propaganda in the District schools.

Berkeley Woolen Mill Strike Ends

Agreement Reached After Six Weeks Shutdown.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.).—Berkeley Woolen Mills resumed operations here today, after a six weeks' strike of its employes over recognition of the union and the status of six discharged employes.

About a third of the workers returned to their posts, and the management said the remainder would be returned as soon as mechanics of resumption could be completed.

Under the terms of the settlement, all but two of the strikers will be taken back. The union issue was left to NRA interpretation.

Woman Voted First Cash Loan On Home Here

Mrs. Bertha A. Saunders, Bedridden Cripple, to Get $1,500.

The first recommendation for a cash loan was made yesterday by the District office of the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

The distressed home owner is Mrs. Bertha A. Saunders, a bedridden cripple, 1811 Thirty-sixth street northwest. Mrs. Saunders made application soon after the home loan office was opened.

Final action on the case was taken late last week, and recommendation of the loan was forwarded to the board of the Home Owners Loan Corporation. Under the home loan act, cash loans may be made up to 40 per cent of the appraised value of the property. A $1,500 loan to Mrs. Saunders was recommended.

Payment of the loan and taxes has been guaranteed by a sister of the applicant, officials of the local loan office said. Mrs. Saunders was reported to be gravely ill at her home last night.

White House Deaf To New York Fight

the administration would like to bag the tiger—starve it to death by cornering patronage—needs no proof. The tiger has had nothing off Mr. Farley's pie counter and nothing off Gov. Lehman's in New York. The city is its only remaining hunting ground. If the Roosevelt Administration can take over this last area, the tiger is doomed, and the Roosevelt political pathway to reelection in 1936 becomes more unencumbered, to say nothing of Mr. Farley's musings about the New York governorship.

The administration strategists could execute no greater coup than to rout Mayor O'Brien and Tammany Boss John F. Curry. The trouble is just how to do it, whether by backing McKee openly, or somebody else, like Mr. LaGuardia. For the Roosevelt high command it has suddenly become a choice too difficult to decide.

Awaits White House Word.

If Mr. McKee runs without any further sign of approval from the Roosevelt administration than is betokened in Mr. Farley's manifest solicitude, Tammany might be crushed, the 1936 prospects brightened, and the fruits, if not the credit, would accrue to the Roosevelt standards. Unhappily, Mr. McKee sat rigidly on the fence all day yesterday, deaf to the pleadings of civic leaders, waiting vainly for a sign from the White House.

To their exhortations, when they visited him in his downtown Manhattan office, Mr. McKee said politely, but noncommittally, "Thank you very much."

Theoretically, Mr. Post and the judge are behind the LaGuardia ticket, on which Mr. Post already has a place, but what is troubling them is whether Mr. McKee's entry into the arena would so split the field as to let Mayor O'Brien and Tammany win.

"As it stands today," remarked Mr. Post concerning the complications, "LaGuardia is sure to win. If McKee comes in, I still think LaGuardia will run."

As for the mayor, as he arrived at the New York City Hall yesterday, he was asked if he would accept a Supreme Court place and withdraw from the race.

"Now listen . . . " snorted his honor.

Talk Rings Willing.

"I have no political interests," McKee observed. He remarked that to run he would have to give up a $50,000 a year job. The mayor's pay is $29,915. "I might say," he added, "that after 15 years of public service, I have a distaste for it. I will not enter the race for political considerations.

"If when the decision is made, and that does not indicate that I shall make it, I shall not be actuated by political ambition. But in the hope that I shall be of service to the citizens of this city."

To the politically attuned ear this had all the ring of the willing candidate, waiting for a masterly voice. The denouement of the first great political drama of the year is yet to come.

Navy Captains Get Authority To Act in Cuba

Hull Instructs Landing if Outbreak Leaves No Time for Talk.

Secretary of State Hull laid down yesterday four important principles governing the action of naval forces off Cuba in the event of outbreaks in the chaotic island. They were:

1. That commander of individual vessels consult with Admiral Charles S. Freeman, commander of United States naval forces in Cuban waters, before taking action, providing there is sufficient time.
2. Commanders may act on their own initiative and judgment in emergencies where delay might increase danger to American lives.
3. Naval forces now off Cuba are there solely for the protection of American and other foreign lives, not property.
4. If Marines or bluejackets land to protect Americans, other foreign nationals may also seek their protection.

The Secretary elucidated these principles in reply to questions as to the conduct of the 20 naval ships now encircling Cuba.

Negotiations among political factions in Cuba are reported to be progressing.

Disorders in the Cuban interior continued, with strikes and Communist demonstrations threatening American interests in many parts of the island. No cases involving violence to Americans have been reported. The State Department believes the presence of naval vessels off Cuba has had a good effect in preventing such attacks.

Americans in Peril.

Havana, Sept. 25 (AP).—Seven Americans, mainly officials of a sugar mill closed by a general strike in that region, were in refuge tonight at the Puerto Padre Yacht Club, in Chaparra, on the north coast of Oriente Province, while an American destroyer stood by in the bay.

An acute situation prevailed in that territory, as a dozen small towns went without light, water or rail facilities due to labor troubles.

A British freighter also stood by in the bay.

Juan Blas Hernandez, veteran revolutionary leader, visited the presidential palace and denied recent reports he had been up in arms against the government.

Political observers believed some unannounced reason caused the veteran rebel leader to come to the capital.

America's System Defies Dictatorship

Dr. Pergler Holds Needs of Government Secure.

America's system of government will continue to meet the needs of the time—without sacrifice of democratic principles to the alleged efficiency of dictatorship, Dr. Charles Pergler, professor of constitutional law, said last night in an address at the opening exercises of the sixty-sixth term of National University.

He pointed out that the Constitution successfully had met the changes of 150 years, and that America had inherited the Anglo-Saxon tradition of making a change only when it proved necessary and inevitable.

Dr. Pergler was one of the eight members of the university teaching staff who spoke. Dr. Hayden Johnson, chancellor, formally opened the university term.

Below is a view of la Avenida Altamira, one of the principal thoroughfares. # Tampico Most Important City To U. S. Firms

Many American Business Interests Operate in Stricken Town.

Tampico, described in dispatches last night as having been virtually destroyed by a 125-mile gale and flood, is, from an American viewpoint, the most important Mexican port.

Department of Commerce reports show 37 American-owned petroleum companies in Mexico had an investment of $200,000,000 in that country last year, of which a substantial percentage centered around Tampico.

Hundreds of Americans make their homes in that portion of the city which rises 150 feet above sea level.

Four of Mexico's richest oil fields lie within 100 miles of the city. It is the terminus of two railroads and the commercial outlet for the northeastern Mexican states.

"The Panuco River, which flows through the city, has overflowed its banks and a considerable area is under water.

"Two oil tankers were washed up on the shores. All of the trees and most of the telephone and electric light poles are blown down and the city is littered with debris."

He said hundreds of citizens gathered at an airdrome, where they obtained shelter in the large hangars.

Another City Hit.

A dispatch from Cardenas, State of San Luis Potosi, said several were dead and 15 houses destroyed.

The German ship Kiel, in Tampico Harbor, offered its radio facilities to the Mexican government. The master in making the offer added:

"Whatever has been said about the Tampico disaster is not enough to describe it."

Nurse and Oil Station Man Accused in 6 Counts.

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—A Federal grand jury today returned a six-count indictment charging a nurse and a former gasoline station attendant with sending five threatening letters through the mail in an attempt to extort $10,000 from Franklin A. Batcheller, of Yonkers, under penalty of kidnaping his daughter, Helen, now the wife of John D. Dougherty. She is a niece of Russell C. Leffingwell, a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co.

The threats were received by Batcheller while preparations were under way for a church wedding for his daughter.

Stuart, of Russell, Urged for Marshal

Recommended to Succeed Brand in Virginia.

Bristol, Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.).—John White Stuart, of Russell County, has been recommended as United States marshal for the western district of Virginia, to succeed W. Lee Brand, whose resignation was tendered to President Roosevelt.

Brand, who was appointed by President Hoover on May 8, 1930, to succeed S. Green Proffitt, has held the office since June 1, 1930, and discharged his duties efficiently, according to Federal authorities.

The former marshal is a Republican leader and has been in business several years. Stuart is a Democrat.

Creation of Matter Claimed By Conversion of Radium Rays

Science Succeeds After Two-Year Battering of Atoms.

Pasadena, Calif., Sept. 25 (AP).—In the debris of the atoms which it has been smashing for two years, science has come abruptly upon its first evidence of a long-sought phenomenon—the creation of matter.

This creation is the apparent complete conversion of a radium gamma ray, something as immaterial as light, into a pair of electrical particles. They are born of the motion of the ray, which has the speed of light. The conversion is motion into matter.

One particle is negative, the other positive. Of these two kinds of electricity, and of nothing else, so far as science has been able to discover, all solid matter is composed.

Known for Some Time.

This electrical construction of matter has been known in some detail for a long time, but there has been nothing to indicate the origin of the minute electrical building stones.

The evidence of this origin has developed about simultaneously in several of the world's foremost physics laboratories. Notable among these are the California Institute of Technology here, the University of California at Berkeley, University of Cambridge and the Curie Laboratory in France.

In smashing atoms six kinds of fragments have been found. They are electrons, protons, alpha particles, neutrons, positrons, and deutons. They appear under the impact against gases and metals of high-speed and high-energy rays produced either artificially by electrical tubes or naturally by radium and cosmic rays.

New Creations.

Until recently scientists thought all the particles were merely debris of broken atoms. But two of them now appear to be in some cases new creations. One of this pair, the electron, has been known a long time. It carries the unit negative electrical charge.

The other paritcle is new, the discovery of Dr. Carl D. Anderson, of California Institute of Technology. It is the positron, a particle carrying a positive electrical charge.

The previously known positive particles, the protons, had 1,800 times the mass, or weight, of electrons. But this new positron has exactly the same small mass as the electron. It is the electron's twin.

He will stop at the family residence there for dinner with the family. His son, James, sails at midnight for Europe.

They also are studying diseases. There are 228 growers keeping this account.

Ship Conquers Worst Storm

Battered Fruit Steamer, Victor in Battle With 140-Mile Hurricane, Docks Safely at Baltimore; Worst in 24 Years, Says Captain.

Baltimore, Sept. 25 (AP).—Battered by seas described by her captain, E. D. Anderson, as the worst in his 24 years of sailing, the Norwegian fruit ship Smaragd docked in Baltimore today.

The vessel, carrying bananas from Cuba, bore the brunt of the hurricane on September 15 and 16. Her entire upper bridge bulkwark was carried away and the bulkwark and rail torn off the lower bridge; she had an empty boat davit, and was minus the starboard shroud on the foremast.

"The hurricane struck about 5 a. m., the morning of Friday, September 15," said the captain. "Until 11:30 we tried to sail into it, but we were standing still, with the engines running full speed ahead. Then the wind strengthened and her head wouldn't stay into it. It was as though her rudder had been broken.

"The men were splendid. They crept along the decks on hands and knees or stuck to the engine room, hanging on to anything they could reach to keep from being thrown into the engines. We tied the man to the wheel.

"The wind, I think, reached 140 miles an hour at times. It was the worst I've seen in 24 years at sea."

$614,000 in Loans To Virginia Banks

R. F. C. Approves Requests of Financial Firms.

Veterans Get McCarran's Aid

Chapters Here Insist on Restoration of Benefits.

Organization of 4,000,000 veterans in a campaign to restore benefits removed by the economy act was urged last night at a mass meeting at the Interior Department of Washington chapters of Disabled American Veterans and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Speakers included Senator Pat McCarren, Nevada; James Van Zandt, National commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Joseph W. McQueen, National commander of the Disabled American Veterans. James F. Kehoe, commander of the D. A. V. chapter, presided.

Senator McCarran served notice he would continue the fight for veterans at the next session of Congress. McQueen recited objectives for which all veterans should strive. They included restoration of all benefits for service-connected veterans and increase of compensation for Federal employes who are veterans.

Authorities learned You had arranged to sail as steerage today on the liner President Hayes and that he planned to live in ease in his native country the rest of his life.

Wallace Gets Stabilization Plan for Sugar

Signature Expected Soon to Project Giving President Power.

(Associated Press.)

Already approved by President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, a sugar stabilization agreement yesterday was laid before Secretary Wallace. His signature, expected soon, would put the pact into effect.

Officials said the various interests represented in the agreement had signed it and that it was in accord with the views of Secretaries Dern and Ickes.

A cardinal feature of the agreement, officials said, is a provision giving the President the right to raise or lower the tentative Cuban quota of 2,000,000 tons annually.

This was expected to make it acceptable to whatever government that may succeed to power in the island. Sugar is the island's principal product and the price it sells for is the barometer of economic conditions there.

Revison Upward.

The total allotment is approximately 7,000,000 raw tons yearly, the quotas for the Philippines, Cuba, and the Virgin Islands having been revised upward since the last formal hearing on the pact.

The Philippines, those who framed the agreement say, will be allowed 1,100,000 tons yearly, instead of the 955,920 first proposed. At the insistence of Secretary Ickes, the Virgin Islands are to be allowed 15,000 tons annually, instead of the first quota of 9,080.

Officials said the other quotas were: Hawaii, 975,000; Puerto Rico, 875,000; Louisiana, 250,000; Florida, 60,000, and domestic beet sugar areas, 1,750,000.

Provision has been made for a reserve corporation which might absorb excess sugar resulting from the increased quotas.

Pact Up to Board.

The agreement was taken to Secretary Wallace yesterday by Dr. John Lee Coulter, of the tariff commission. He indicated he was confident only a few formalities remained before the pact went into operation.

Enforcement of the pact will rest with a sugar stabilization board to be composed of nine members, one of them the Secretary of Agriculture.

In view of his success in bringing about the agreement, Dr Coulter has been suggested for chairman of the sugar board.

2 Hurt as Bridge Falls With Truck

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 24 (AP). A transport truck crashed through the Meehunk Creek State highway bridge today, injuring its two occupants—Walter Bryant, 18, and Cal Crowder, 25, both of Petersburg.

The truck plunged its cargo of canned vegetables into the creek when the east end of the bridge caved in. Traffic Officer W. P. Salter said one of the bridge girders gave way as the truck came upon it. The truck hung in the steel work.

Traffic was detoured through Lindsay, returning to the highway at Cismont. Department of highway authorities said repairs would take several days.

Young Group Of Democrats Worry Elders

They Are Ordered to Be "Regular" in Sending Patronage Pleas.

(Associated Press.)

The Democratic national committee has served notice on the Young Democratic Clubs of America that their recommendations on patronage will not be recognized unless sent through the regular State organizations.

The letters, sent out by Richard F. Roper, executive secretary of the national committee, gave rise to reports here that the national committee planned to close the headquarters here of the Young Democratic Clubs of America by ceasing to provide them with funds.

Roper and Clifford Woodward, of Des Moines, the newly elected president of the Young Democrats, said however, the reports were false. Roper added that the written financial agreement between the two organizations, which expires on September 30, would not be renewed "until certain interpretations of their constitution are made that are satisfactory to the national organization."

Will Provide Office.

Meanwhile, he said, the national committee would continue to provide an office for the Young Democrats.

Roper said confusion had been caused in some States over patronage because of the desire of young Democrats to have their recommendations considered by the national organization without approval of the regular State leaders.

"We can't have two Democratic parties in each State," Roper said. "Patronage must be handled by the regular organization."

Woodward placed Miss Rowena Ruth Lockett, of California, vice president and former secretary to James Roosevelt, in charge of national headquarters. Yesterday, President Roosevelt appointed her recorder in the Public Lands Office of the Interior Department.

No Quarrel With Farley.

Woodward said he would soon name an executive secretary to handle headquarters.

"We are behind the President in everything he has done and is doing and is going to do," Woodward said. "We have no quarrel with James A. Farley over patronage and we will cooperate with him at all times."

The Federal Diary

(Trade-mark Applied For)

By Morgan Baker

GOVERNMENT officials are becoming almost as secretive about new jobs that are opened as they formerly were on the taboo subject of dismissals.

BAKER.

There is a reason for the silence.

When a newspaper announces a bureau is taking on new help, its corridors are crowded for days with unemployed persons clamoring for work. Division heads are given no peace and job seekers, as a rule are given no jobs. Most bureaus already have so many applications that it will take years to catch up.

As an example, the new Public Works Administration has announced a double shift system that will require more help. The 220 or 300 more jobs at stake won't make a dent in the 20,000 applications on file. Secretary Ickes warns job hunters it will be a waste of time for them to apply.

AMONG numerous cogs of the NRA machinery that are coming into prominence in the process of reorganization, is the recently appointed head of the "Code Analysis Division," Thomas R. Charsee.

Harris & Ewing.

T. R. CHARSEE

Mr. Charsee's experience as an organizer for trade associations is of particular value in his new capacity. From 1929 to the present year he was successively executive secretary of the National Association of Ornamental Iron and Bronze Manufacturers; editor of Metal Products Magazine; organized and directed the National Wood Heel Manufacturer's Association and was counsel for the National League of Commission merchants.

Mr. Charsee has been a regular contributor to many trade publications and in April, 1932, one of his articles stated: "Trade associations will play a vital part during the period of reconstruction through the establishment of codes of trade practices and the cooperative handling of other trade problems." His present work is devoted to formulating and analyzing such codes for NRA.

A graduate of Georgetown University, Mr. Charsee was for a period associated with Senator Millard E. Tydings in law practice in Baltimore. He later became a member of the legal staff of the Federal Trade Commission, where he was engaged in studying trade associations and practices. He is author of the authoritative work, "Legal Aspects of Cooperative Marketing Associations."

National Bank Is to Be Open Regularly From Now on.

The receiver of the Commercial National Bank of Washington announced yesterday plans for payment today of $1,030,601.70 as the initial dividend of 20 per cent authorized by J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency.

The bank will be open daily from today on, creditors being required to present orange-colored receipts issued when their claims were proved. Receiver's certificates will be delivered with checks of the Comptroller. No cash will be given.

Where accounts are in joint names, both parties must sign receipts for the check, and where accounts are in hands of executors, administrators, guardians or trustees, by court appointment, an up-to-date certificate of appointment must be produced.

Creditors who conveniently can do so are requested by the receiver to postpone claiming dividends for several days, to avoid congestion. Payment of this dividend covers all claims proved through September 12.

Highway Signs Held Business Diverter

An effort to get authorities to change the signs on alternate Highway No. 240, which, they say, take tourist traffic directly away from the business district of Bethesda and Wisconsin avenue and shift it into Washington over residental Connecticut avenue, will be made by the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, the board of directors decided last night.

G. Wady Imirie was named special committeeman and director in the effort to get the signs changed. Members of his committee are Ralph Sabine, Gordon Burows, W. E. Perry, T. F. Lamin and F. W. Bogley.

Eighty-two custodial employes of the Washington City Postoffice and one at the Georgetown branch will be automatically separated from the service October 1, when jurisdiction of postoffices is transferred from the Postoffice Department to the Treasury.

Postoffice officials, who recently announced that 7,000 employes throughout the country will be separated, said yesterday virtually all with civil service status would be reappointed. A slight reduction of force, they indicated, is in prospect.

Officials said postoffice branches in Washington, being operated under lease, are not affected. The transfer was authorized in the President's reorganization order.

New Market, Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.).—Percy S. Loth, secretary of the Shenandoah Valley, Inc., says advices from cavern resorts indicate the recent Labor Day tourist traffic increased 40 to 50 per cent over the period last year.

"We are notified," said Secretary Loth, "that managers of the caverns attribute the heavy increase to consistent advertising by the Shenandoah Valley, Inc.

"We have maintained advertising in nearby metropolitan papers and in some papers of the South."

The organization is planning an advertising campaign to bring Florida-bound tourists via the Valley route this winter.

Tax Cut Nears For Exchange

Proposal of Untermyer May Avert Removal to Site in Newark.

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Fate of the New Jersey Stock Exchange tonight became uncertain as result of indications that New York City authorities might reconsider proposed taxes on Wall Street brokers.

The new exchange, formed by the New York trading organization last week, was scheduled to open in the Center Market Building in Newark next Monday, and until late today it appeared even abandonment of city taxes would not interfere with its debut.

Samuel Untermyer, sponsor of the city's emergency tax program, at a hearing before Mayor O'Brien this afternoon, recommended dropping the taxes if the exchange called off its plan to transfer the bulk of its business to New Jersey. Meanwhile, it was asserted at the stock exchange that no lease on the Centre would be signed today.

Untermyer declared every reasonable effort should be made to dissuade the stock exchange from carrying out its threat of flight. Asserting he still believed the brokers were bluffing, Untermyer nevertheless counseled delay in adopting the taxes.

Insull Linked To Opera Star

Miss M'Cormic, Utilities Chief Too Friendly, Prince Charges.

Los Angeles, Sept. 25 (AP).—Prince Serge Mdivani's legal retort to the separate maintenance suit of Mary McCormic, opera star, is that he desires an outright divorce—mainly on his charge that she has been unduly friendly with Samuel Insull, former Chicago utilities magnate and grand opera sponsor.

The answer of Prince Serge, one of three brothers from the Soviet province of Georgia who have married prominent American women, was filed in Superior Court here today.

Prince Serge also charged Miss McCormic once struck him in a Hollywood night club, became so boisterous as to attract attention, and tore his clothing after they reached home.

"Cowardly," Says Singer.

Chicago, Sept. 25 (AP).—Mary McCormic today branded as "absurd" and "cowardly" charges made by her estranged husband, Prince Serge Mdivani, that she had been unduly friendly with her erstwhile backer, Samuel Insull.

"It's a shame to bring that old gentleman into it. I feel so sorry for him—he's had so many troubles," she said.

The ruling climaxed a stormy hearing on the fifth annual accounting of expenditures the former wife of the film comedian, Charles Chaplin, made as guardian of Charles Spencer Chaplin, jr., 8, and Sidney Earl Chaplin, 7.

In tears, Mrs. Chaplin was led from the witness stand as she screamed:

"I can't answer! I can't keep figures in my heart! I wish their father had the boys' interest at heart as much as I have. He keeps bringing me into court at the slightest provocation.

"These attorneys keep bringing me to court. Why should I be here at all? If Mr. Chaplin really cared about the children he would not keep asking me to pay big attorney fees just so he can find out about the removal of a wart."

Factory Heads Given Ruling On Closed Shop

Labor Contracts Made With Single Union Violates NRA.

(Associated Press.)

Thousands of manufacturers over the Nation were told last night by the National Association of Manufacturers that a closed union shop, under which labor contracts were made with a single union, would violate the intent of the recovery act.

A copyrighted bulletin was sent out which took direct issue with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and informed employers that under the law they could advise workers against joining a labor union, or, within limits, offer special inducements such as group insurance, to employes who will join and bargain through a company union.

President Roosevelt meanwhile sought new stimulus for the recovery campaign through public works loans to the railroads with which to buy steel rails if the steel companies would cut the prices.

The bulletin of the Manufacturers' Association was interpreted by NRA officials as widening the breach between capital and labor.

The manufacturers' bulletin, prepared by John C. Gall, said that "since the recovery act leaves to the employe the clear option as to the form of collective bargaining he desires, if any, there is no difference whatever under the law between a company union, on the one hand, and an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, on the other."

Hearings opened before deputy administrators upon codes for the hotel and the dyeing and cleaning industries, with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor asking a general rewriting of the hotel charter.

Huge Crowd Sees Downtown Holdup

said, slugged him near the base of the skull with a blackjack.

Morrison said he held the money, wrapped in plain brown paper, tightly between his legs. The three fought over a large area of the sidewalk. Again Morrison was struck on the head.

"My legs became numb," the store manager said. "I felt myself losing consciousness and fought to hold the money."

His assailants dropped their weapons in a final effort to wrest the money package from his grip. The last blow forced Morrison to relax his hold and the package slipped to the street.

Bandit Grabs Money.

It was picked up by one of the bandits. They both turned and fled toward H street. Morrison's cries brought scores of passersby to his aid. They took up the pursuit.

A woman, standing at Fifteenth and H streets, saw the men running toward her and screamed for help. It was then one of the bandits fired the wild shot.

With his companion apparently safely on the way to freedom, the second gunman ducked into the Shoreham Building. He tripped over the doorsill and fell sprawling along the floor.

Several men attempted to grab him, but he regained his feet and ran to the street.

Surrenders to Police.

Attracted by the shot, Private J. C. Bracey, of the Park Police, started to the scene. At Vermont avenue and H street, across Lafayette Park from the White House, he came face to face with the fleeing gunman.

The smoking revolver was still in his hand. Bracey whipped out his own gun and told him to "drop it."

The bandit tossed his gun over a hedge and surrendered without a struggle. He said his name was Maurice Shelton, 24, of Brookmont, Md. He was booked at police headquarters for investigation. Police say they found 15 rounds of ammunition on his person.

A few minutes later Grover R. Gwaltney, of 2019 N street northwest, appeared at headquarters and told police his Yellow cab had been stolen. He said he was driving one of the two Yellow Cabs on Washington streets.

Held For Questioning.

The taxi was parked in front of his home, Gwaltney declared, and when he returned after supper it was gone. He was held for questioning.

Another taxi driver, whose name police had not obtained at a late hour, reported he was forced at gunpoint to drive one of the bandits to an uptown section of the city. Police refused to name the location.

The driver said he was parked near Fifteenth and H streets, when the man threatened him with a revolver and forced him to drive. He did not say whether the man carried a package or not.

Police said Owens was identified by Morrison as one of the holdup participants. Morrison said the job had apparently been planned in advance. He believes he was followed after leaving the store.

Church School Meets.

Danville, Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.). The annual training school of the First Presbyterian Church for Sunday school workers got under way here yesterday and will continue through Friday. Eight courses are listed.

Robbers Take Auto, Thwart Virginia Chase

Flee With Cash Register, But Fingerprints Remain in Store.

New Market, Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.). One of the boldest robberies in Shenandoah County in ten years occurred in Woodstock soon after 3 a. m. today, when the Ford Motor salesroom of S. G. Clarke was entered.

Selecting a new automobile, cash register, adding machine, six sets of tires and tubes, six sets of dealers' license plates, parts and accessories, and then draining the gasoline from all other cars stored in the place, the robbers fled, leaving numerous fingerprints and a $5 bill. Value of the loot was placed at $2,000.

County officers believe there were three marauders, basing their supposition on Clarke's statement that the cash register contained $18. The finding of the $5 bill led officers to believe a three-way division had been made and one of the thieves failed to get the "long end of it." Fingerprint experts were called in and the prints were taken to Washington for development and identification.

Gitcho, in whose grocery store Luer was held two hours after the kidnaping, denied on the stand that he had any guilty knowledge of the abduction. He said Norvell asked him for the use of his store, ostensibly as a rendezvous for fellow gamblers.

Norvell testified last Friday that he participated in the kidnaping unwillingly out of fear of "Irish" O'Malley, a fugitive, and at the insistence of Mrs. Lillian Chessen, the only woman in the group of six defendants on trial.

Government Links "Balls" For Moose Charities at Senator's Trial.

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—The Government, trying Senator James J. Davis on charges of lottery law violations, succeeded today in getting evidence in the record concerning charity enterprises of the Loyal Order of Moose, basis of the case.

Davis is on trial with Theodore G. Miller, head of the Moose propagation department. Davis is director-general of the order. The Government contends he and Miller sent lottery tickets interstate.

The defense kept much Government evidence from the report, but a letter pertaining to the 1930 charity activities of the order was admitted. The letter was from Malcolm R. Giles, supreme Moose secretary, and was addressed to all lodges. It said Miller was preparing a fund-raising plan and asked the lodges not to consider plans submitted by independent companies.

Government attempted to show that the senator helped conduct the "Mooseheart charity balls" in 1930 and so knew of the character of "balls" in 1931. The defense successfully objected to admission of any evidence to link Davis with the 1930 activities.

Devaluation as a Cure.

Immediate devaluation of the dollar is being urged in some quarters as a means of appeasing demands for other forms of inflation believed to be more dangerous. If the gold content of the dollar were to be reduced at once, it is said, business would accommodate itself to the new situation with comparative ease, especially if the devaluation measured approximately the existing depreciation of the dollar in terms of gold currencies. Confidence, the argument runs, would be restored with the removal of uncertainty regarding the future status of the currency and the chief obstacle to revival of investment activity would be removed.

These are attractive assumptions, but they take for granted a great deal that calls for proof. There is no assurance that a dollar containing a third or a half less gold than the present unit would produce the rise in prices desired by the advocates of devaluation. The prices of goods imported and exported obviously would be affected directly by a change in the gold content of the dollar, but even in such cases, it is doubtful whether the effect would be as prompt or as calculable as the theory assumes.

In the domestic field, with gold payments suspended, and the gold dollar a mere accounting unit so far as the public is concerned, what reason is there to conclude that a decree reducing the gold weight of the dollar would raise prices quoted in terms of dollars? Not only now but at all times the domestic price level is determined by many factors related remotely or not at all to the amount of gold in the dollar or the number of gold dollars held in banking reserves and as cover for notes.

The bulk of the country's business is transacted by use of deposit currency, and the volume of deposits expands and contracts without maintaining a fixed relation to gold reserves. In fact, an elastic credit and currency system, which has been the goal of modern credit economies, is designed to emancipate a country from too great dependence upon its gold reserves.

It also has to be kept in mind that prices rise in response to offers which are payable in cash or checks against deposit accounts. If money and deposits are turning over or circulating rapidly, prices tend to rise. On the other hand, bank vaults may be choked with gold, but ordinarily prices do not rise unless reserves are made the basis for loan expansion and consequent increases in the volume of active deposits.

Our monetary gold stock now stands at the extraordinarily high figure of $4,327,000,000. The Reserve Banks had a gold reserve of $3,590,966,000 on September 20, while the member banks are in possession of excess reserves which conceivably might become the basis for a credit expansion approximating $7,000,000,000. It should be evident from these figures that the country has no lack of resources upon which to base an expansion of currency and credit and to initiate inflation of a dangerous type, without resorting to measures designed to release gold from banking reserves.

If reducing the gold content of the dollar were to create fears regarding the soundness of the currency, a flight from the dollar might momentarily increase the velocity of circulation of both money and deposits, and thus tend to raise prices. Barring this incalculable factor, the gold value of the dollar today has little influence over the level of domestic prices in a country with a managed currency and credit system. Consequently, immediate devaluation of the dollar, instead of putting a quietus upon demands for more inflation, may bring severe disappointment to those who expected prices to advance sharply. In that case, the result would be fresh demands either for a greater measure of devaluation or for some other method of bringing about an inflationary advance of the general price level.

Japanese-Soviet Friction.

The arrest of four prominent Soviet officials of the Chinese Eastern railway at Harbin has caused the Soviet government to make what is described as a "decisive protest" to the Japanese government, which is charged with having ordered the arrests. The incident occurred Sunday, following tedious and fruitless negotiations between Japanese and Soviet representatives at Tokyo, looking to acquisition by Manchukuo of the Chinese Eastern.

A sharp note had been sent to Japan by the Soviet vice commissar of foreign affairs, brushing aside the pretense that Manchukuo is independent, and insisting that Japan should assume responsibility for the railroad negotiations. The Japanese negotiators have maintained that Manchukuo, and not Japan, is primarily interested in acquiring Russia's rights in the railway.

It now seems to be assumed at Moscow that Japan intends to usurp Soviet rights in Manchuria. Long delay, the raising of insignificant questions, and one provocative act after another are attributed to the Japanese, for the alleged purpose of wearing down Soviet resistance and forcing a retreat from one position to another until Japan's objective has been attained.

Despite the indignant tone of the note to Japan, Soviet Russia has pursued a pacific policy in the Far East, and apparently it will go to extreme lengths to avoid an open break with Japan. Well-informed observers generally believe that Soviet Russia realizes its impotence in Asia in the face of Japanese policy. The complete occupation of Manchuria, to the exclusion of Soviet as well as all other foreign interests, is regarded as Japan's central plan.

Jobless Wanderers.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration will make special efforts during the coming winter to take care of workless itinerants of both sexes. The aimless migrations of tens of thousands of young persons have raised new problems in many States. Stealing of rides on freight trains has resulted in accidents and fatalities; hitch-hiking has become not only a nuisance, but a danger; and the appearance of jobless strangers in a locality already crowded with unemployed creates an insupportable burden.

It is proposed to grant Federal relief funds to 40 States in which the migratory jobless constitute a serious problem. The States, however, will be required to set up a suitable organization to care for the wanderers, including decent shelter and food while jobs are being provided for them. Arrangements will be made for registration of these individuals, and when jobs are found they will be transported to the place of work. The State organizations will be expected to provide temporary work for the transients while they are waiting for steady jobs. It has been suggested that the States can organize conservation camps similar to those set up by the Federal Government.

Every effort is to be made by the Relief Administration to put an end to the aimless wandering that demoralizes young people and burdens communities that have their own citizens to look after. Some of the estimates of the number of these wanderers are evidently excessive, but it is not doubted that they number tens of thousands. Some of them are mere children of 10 or 15 years. Possibly the majority of all wanderers have never worked at all. They are new additions to the country's army of unemployed. The first task in dealing with them seems to lie in creating places where they can be temporarily provided with shelter, food, and work, so that they will be prevented from wandering.

Perverse Trade Trends.

August imports into the United States amounted to $155,000,000, while exports totaled only $131,000,000. The result is an unfavorable merchandise balance of $24,000,000—the largest since March, 1926. This is the perverse outcome of a dollar depreciation which was expected to discourage imports and stimulate export activity.

As compared with August, 1932, increases have occurred in the values of both imports and exports, but the rise has been much greater in the case of imports. August exports, moreover, declined 9 per cent in value from July, and the total for the month was less than half the figure reported for any previous August in the period 1926 to 1930 inclusive. Imports, on the other hand, showed a more than seasonal rise from the July level. In view of the advances in the prices of all imports and exports, it is evident that the value increases do not represent a corresponding expansion in the volume of our foreign trade.

If other things would remain the same, the drop in the gold value of the dollar would, no doubt, have a more perceptible effect upon exports. But other things never remain the same in a changing world. While dollars have been falling in value, domestic prices of export goods have been rising, and the rise has been so great in some cases as to offset, or more than offset, external depreciation of the dollar. The currencies of other countries, too, have been rising and falling while the dollar has been fluctuating, and tariffs and import quotas have been employed to counteract the effects of our monetary manipulation.

In short, our experience seems to show that currency depreciation loses its power to stimulate export trade in a world in which most countries are either resorting to currency depreciation or building defenses against the depreciated currencies of other nations.

Jobs vs. the Machine.

Jobs have become the objective toward which all effort is directed. Hence, it is not uncommon to find groups refusing to use labor-saving machinery, and any tendency to extend industrial facilities may be frowned upon because overproduction is possible with the existing equipment.

A. W. Robertson, one of the country's leading industrialists, called attention to this line of thought in a speech last week before the Controllers Institute of America. Numerous plans forbidding members of trade associations to purchase new machinery, he said, are being submitted to Washington. There is a general feeling abroad in the land that available work should be reserved for unemployed men, wherever possible. Some municipalities have passed ordinances compelling the substitution of the pick, shovel and wheelbarrow for modern machinery.

The theory of substituting human toil for machine work is justified only on the grounds of emergency. No one proposes a return to the old methods of doing the world's work, but under the present circumstances, when several million men are idle, there is a very natural tendency to emphasize the importance of mere jobs. Protests from such men as Mr. Robertson to the effect that progress is jeopardized by this reversion to discarded methods usually are brushed aside. In the minds of a great many people the immediate objective is more employment without regard for labor efficiency or the development of improved processes.

A large part of the industrial equipment of the United States is devoted to the production of other industrial equipment. If plants turning out consumers' goods should build up their operations to 100 per cent of capacity, depression might still be acute in many parts of the country. In other words, the stimulation of industries manufacturing finished products, with neither industrial expansion nor replacement of obsolete machinery, would leave a large portion of American industry still in a slump.

People need clothing and food, at all times. Hence, industries supplying these needs tend to keep a more even pace, while industries turning out steel, machinery, tools and building materials usually are very active in times of prosperity and very dull during a depression.

A great deal of importance must be attached to the restoration of industries producing capital goods. A policy which tends to keep the tool and machine making industries inactive for the sake of creating temporary jobs may serve to defeat its own purpose.

Relief for Golfers.

The golf ball, as every one knows, is no respecter of persons, not even of champions. It is not unusual for names high and mighty in the game to be eliminated before a tournament begins. That is what happened to Ouimet in the sectional qualifying rounds for the recent American amateur contest at Kenwood. One fit of obstinacy on the part of a golf ball may deny a first-class player the opportunity of participating in the match play where champions are made.

A good deal of complaint is heard about the rigors of qualifying for the American amateur tournament. Players object to being eliminated by the margin of one or two strokes merely because only 32 golfers are allowed to enter the match play. Crusaders for a new deal in amateur golf call attention to the fact that both the finalists at Kenwood were compelled to play off ties in order to enter the tournament. Golf is tricky enough under any circumstances, they say, without multiplying the hazards which players must encounter before the championship play begins.

As a result the United States Golf Association is considering amendment of its rules so that a larger number of golfers would be able to qualify and eliminations would be made through 18-hole matches until the semi-finals. Then the four undefeated players would continue in 36-hole matches to determine the championship. This plan is similar to the one used in Great Britain. Perhaps it would be more satisfactory to the majority of golfers. Anything that promises to minimize the hazards of qualifying seems to have a powerful appeal to the followers of the tricky pellet.

Paradox of the Dollar.

From the Kansas City Times.

Never in all the world's experience with monetary systems has there been a parallel to the present situation in the United States. There have been many instances of a depreciated money unit, but never before has there been a debasement of a nation's currency under conditions similar to those now existing in the United States.

The gold value of the dollar has dropped to 65 cents, with a greater supply of gold in the country than ever before relative to the total quantity of money and to the total volume of business, and this has occurred without a single governmental action of debasement except an arbitrary suspension of gold payments at a time when there was no great pressure for gold redemption. It is true that Congress has authorized the President to adopt extreme measures to depreciate the dollar, but none of these measures has been put into operation except the ineffective attempt to expand available credit by the Federal reserve purchases of United States Government securities.

The gold value of the dollar today is less than it was in 1866, following the Civil War, when the credit of the Government had been shattered and the business of the country had been upset by the great and expensive four years' conflict between the States and when the Government had been forced by the exigencies of the war to issue, for the first and only time in its history, a currency which it could not maintain on a parity with gold.

Even during the panic of 1873 the average gold value of the dollar was 88 cents, in contrast with its present value of 65 cents.

Even on the "Black Friday" of 1869, when ruthless speculators undertook to corner gold in the New York market, the quotation for gold rose only a little higher—and that only for a moment—than the price authorized by the Government today for new gold, based on its value in Europe. In 1869 the country's total gold supply was only $5 per capita compared with $34 at the present time.

The depreciation of the dollar during and after the Civil War was due to the enforced suspension of gold payments—enforced because the Treasury did not have gold to pay. The present depreciation exists in the face of the fact that the United States Treasury and the Federal Reserve banks hold $4,000,000,000 in gold or $6,000,000,000, measured by the depreciated dollar.

A disconcerting fact about the present situation is that general prices have failed to advance as much as the gold value of the dollar has depreciated, though higher prices were practically the sole object of all the measures proposed to make a cheaper dollar.

Once more it must be emphasized that in the highly complex business and financial organization of modern times, the amount of currency and the gold content of the dollar are only minor factors in the price structure. Confidence, business activity, supply and demand, foreign trade, the unbalanced condition of industry, the burden of debt, all enter into the situation. Events of the last few months have demonstrated that the desired results can not be obtained by dealing only with money.

Letters to the Editor.

Filipino States What He Says Are Main Objections to the Hawes-Cutting Act.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial, "A Filipino Plebiscite," you stated that "A plebiscite may be the most satisfactory way of deciding" the issue regarding the Hawes-Cutting act. We agree with you fully on this point. There is no doubt that as between independence and indefinite retention, the Filipinos are overwhelmingly for independence. This stand has been clearly expressed in many ways during the centuries of Spanish domination in our country and throughout America's rule.

It is not true that our people are opposed to the act because it cuts the islands adrift; neither is it true that the Filipinos are afraid of the economic consequences of independence. We know that whenever independence has been achieved there has always been some kind of suffering and hardship. Among the main objections to the independence act are that the ten-year transition period is too long, and that the United States should retain military and naval bases after we are independent. We reiterate that the people of the Philippines are for independence and all that it means.

If Elm Had Been an English Tree It Would Be Famed in Literature.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial article about the saving of the elm recalled to my mind the beautiful description of this noble tree by Henry Ward Beecher.

The elm abounds in all its glory in New England, and Mr. Beecher thus dwells upon its matchless splendor:

"Had the elm been an English tree, and had Chaucer seen and loved and sung it; had Shakespeare and every English poet hung some garlands upon it, it would have lifted up its head now, not only the noblest of all growing things, but enshrined in a thousand rich associations of history and literature."

You Can and You Can't, You Will and You Won't.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nothing can be perfectly consistent these days. We must have tariff protection and we mustn't have excessive duties. The Government must practice economy and the Government must spend. The Government must aid the States, and the Government must not permit the States to neglect their duties. People must economize and people must spend. Cities must provide only the essentials, and cities must expand their public works to provide employment.

Suggests That Police Whistle Might Have Saved Life of Mail Pilot Neff.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the case of the pilot, Hall Neff, if he had carried a police whistle fastened to his clothing he could have attracted attention almost immediately, because his injuries did not deprive him of the power of using it. If it was understood that all pilots carried police whistles, to be used in case of emergency, any person within hearing distance would investigate and report. It might be the means of saving many lives, and also United States mail.

Protests Against Shrieking Sirens of Ambulances.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why is the howling and unearthly screeching of ambulances permitted in Washington? Lord have mercy on any unfortunate patient that is carried in one of these machines of nerve-crucifying shrieks. No time is saved by the howl in going to a call. In fact, time is lost as a result of the confusion caused. Why make the helpless public suffer just to please a wild, joyriding ambulance crew? No other city in the country is pestered with this nuisance as is Washington. P. J. H. FARRELL.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS

This book was published in London in 1726 and immediately became a best-seller. It was the chief topic of conversation at dinner parties and in clubs, and the bookshops found it difficult to supply the demand. But the remarkable thing is that there has not been a single week, from 1726 to 1933, when copies have not been sold. It is one of the world's favorites. Why is this? What quality gives it perpetual popularity?

Well, it is a work of pure imagination and yet written like fact. Jonathan Swift and his contemporary, D. Defoe, mastered the art of lying; they are the best liars in literature. Every boy who reads "Gulliver's Travels" knows the story is true, because the drawings in the first book with the midgets and in the second with the giants, are according to scale. The style is as matter-of-fact as a guidebook.

This is the most terrible satire on humanity ever written. One reason why it is so much more powerful than the satires of today is because Swift satirized the vices of humanity, whereas most of our satirists today satirize virtues. Today our satirists attempt to ridicule respectability, chastity, courage, philanthropy, patriotism, public spirit; their books quickly perish. Swift satirized greed, lust, deceit, treachery, ingratitude, meanness, cowardice, vulgarity.

But what would he have thought if he had known that this terrific attack on human nature would become the favorite book of children.

The Plants That Never Have Improved Are the Ones That Never Were Useful.

By Robert Quillen

Some years ago the editor of a popular magazine resigned and began to do free-lance work. That is, he wrote articles and stories for the magazines and sold them where he could.

Of course his work had merit, else he would have found no market. But it wasn't the kind of work he wished to do, and some months ago he quit it and began to gather material for a biography.

He doesn't expect the biography to make him rich, but he doesn't care about that. Confessing his motive to a friend, he said: "I have written so much tripe here of late that I've got to do something worth while to get back my self-respect."

A similar motive has changed the plans of a young doctor who is now practicing in a city of fabulous wealth.

When he began his career in the city some years ago, he catered to the rich and made a great deal of money.

But he doesn't love money for its own sake and his rich practice soon cost him his self-respect. His rich patients, being willing to pay for attention and innocently assuming that money could pay for anything desired, frequently called him to mend ills that were wholly imaginary. So long as he got his money, they saw no reason why he should be reluctant to dance attendance.

But when a proud man has spent his years in learning a useful science, he can't resign himself to a life of humbug and pretense without losing his self-respect.

The young doctor quit wasting his time and energy on hangovers and the nerves of boredom and devoted himself to the poor who needed him. "The practice of medicine is a dog's life," said he, "if you can't feel that you are being useful."

Every individual worth his salt reaches a similar conviction when he matures.

America's best-known cynic affects a great scorn for idealists and those who profess a desire to serve, but he is tarred with the same stick. He is a reformer. Every line he writes to blister and lambast fraud and hypocrisy and corruption is an effort to serve mankind.

To be useful is to feel respectable. It is the sign and the high calling of regular folks. And it still remains true that the one who is greatest among us is the one who serves us all.

Comment of the Press

Kansas City Star.

People living near Muscle Shoals and in other parts of the Tennessee River Valley are reported bitter in complaints that the promised development of that region, from which so much was expected, has been delayed in its beginning month after month. For the valley authority it is said that plans for the elaborate development require time and that working out of the project must be a matter of years or decades, rather than of months.

Here is a common experience with far-reaching enterprises of practically every sort. At first, the burst of enthusiasm, the dream and the glow of high hope; then the gradual settling down to routine, followed by questioning, restlessness and impatience, with speculation as to whether anything at all is to be done.

It is a necessary and no doubt only a temporary stage of the program in the valley. What has occurred there has come, in some degree, to the whole recovery effort. Gradually people learn that miracles do not come overnight.

Question No. 1.

Toledo Blade.

Leading question in Mr. Farley's civil service examination: "Whose banner did you carry around the Chicago convention hall?"

Alternate Jurors.

Brooklyn Eagle.

Fourteen seats, not the immemorial twelve, have been set in the jury box for the current trial of Isidor J. Kresel. Thus comes into use the recent act of the Legislature permitting the employment of alternate jurors in the State courts.

The innovation will be watched with interest. It requires testing to show how it will work. Alternate jurors have had somewhat of a test in Federal courts, but that does not necessarily show how they will do under the State system.

The extra jurors serve the purpose of obviating a mistrial in case a number of the actual jury of 12 becomes disqualified or incapacitated during the course of the trial.

The Drys Should Help, Too.

Kansas City Star.

The liquor control system to be worked out for Missouri, or for any other State, is a concern of every citizen affected. It is not a question for the professional wets, any more than it would be for the professional drys. Both these elements should aid in the formulation of a plan that will permit an absolute minimum of evils in dealing with an endlessly troublesome question, and counsel should be had from every other intelligent and informed source.

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

SPEAKING OF THE COAL CODE.

It is agreed, insofar as the homes of America are concerned, that the coal code for the winter of 1933-1934 shall contain the following provisions:

1—In homes where there are no children the wife shall take an occasional look at the furnace during the day and put on enough coal to keep the furnace from going out.

2—No husband shall be asked, ordered or expected to be responsible for the furnace fire during the hours when he is at business.

3—It shall be the duty of every wife to remember about the dampers.

4—In a home where there are children over 14 years of age, no violation of the child labor laws shall be construed as having taken place when junior is required to shake down the ashes.

5—With all respect to the Blue Eagle, a man having two or more grown male children in good health and suffering no physical disability shall not be required to put on more help to get a few shovelfuls of coal thrown into the furnace now and then.

6—The provisions of the above paragraph shall also apply in the matter of getting the ashes removed.

7—Heating contractors and stove experts called in to see why the furnace does not seem to work as it did last year shall not pull that old one about needing a new grate.

8—Wives shall let the matter of emptying the ash cans rest with their husbands and shall not harp on the subject while there is still room in the ash can for another shovelful.

9—When a couple returning from the theater at midnight finds the furnace fire has gone out, it shall be optional with the husband whether to build a new one then or wait until morning.

10—In such disputes, where the husband has won the right to postpone rebuilding the fire until morning, he shall in no case be aroused out of a sound sleep at 4 a. m. and urged to get an early start.

11—With references to paragraphs 9 and 10, it is hereby specified that the husband shall have a right to squawk should he get up, go down to the cold cellar, dump the ashes, pile in new wood and then discover that the box of matches he always kept on the ledge is missing.

Mr. Eastman is informed that all railroad presidents in the country have cut their salaries to $60,000 a year. At that price they must feel that they are practically riding the beams.

Let's inflate; it's milk and honey,
For then we'll have confetti-money.

THOSE WHO HAVE FEARS, ETC.

Pity the poor railroad president—
His lot is sad and drear;
He has to play with choo-choo cars
For sixty grand a year.

NEW DEAL IN AGRICULTURE.

It was a South Carolina banker-farmer who gave the agricultural interests the doubtful benefit of a new variety of cotton that grows five pockets where only four grew before, and it is a South Carolina farmer who now comes forward with something both interesting and profitable, say the Charlotte Observer. He has been experimenting with crossing the tomato plant with the nuisance known as the jimson weed and has succeeded in making the latter produce tomatoes as well as burrs. He shows one jimson stem upon which three perfectly good tomatoes are growing, and declares, as an additional virtue, that tomatoes grown on this weed are free from blight or wilt or any of the other ailments to which the tomato plants are liable.

SHIPS MAY BE STAINLESS.

Construction of ships' hulls of gleaming stainless steel may follow tests being planned by British engineers who think this metal will overcome the troubles caused by barnacles, which frequently foul keels and have to be removed.

The steel to be tested will contain 18 per cent chromium and 8 per cent nickel, according to the Literary Digest. Part of the sheets will be left in the hot rolled condition, part covered with ship paint and the rest polished. They will be immersed three months off Southland pier, London, where the water is infested with barnacles.

The Second Sitting.

He was in a towering rage
As the camera shutter snapped.
On his face was every trace
Of hate and anger trapped.
Later when the finished print
Came for him to see
Shocked and shamed, the man exclaimed:
"Was this made for me?

"Where's the twinkle in my eye?
Where's the smile I often wear?
Would you say I looked this way?
Is this picture fair?"
And the camera man replied:
"I can only say
Lens and plate on such a date
Caught you just that way!"

"Burn the print and break the plate, Photographer," he cried.
"Pictures I refuse to buy
Of my baser side.
Let me come and sit again.
This is not worth while.
Let us try once more and I

"Sit again you may.
We can make new plates and break
This hateful one today,
But for those your angry words
Burned with stinging pain
And who saw your temper raw
Can you sit again?"

First in War and Peace

Contrasting Two Ways of Life In Our Government Buildings

By William Harlan Hale.

TO say the Department of Commerce building has an air of haste, confusion and suspense about it is to repeat the obvious. An enemy of the administration might say that it has the air of a looney-bin; that has been said, too, more than once.

Thousands of persons have come in contact with this rushing headquarters, and they have spread throughout the country the idea that all Washington is like that. They have called it as excitable as the corner of Broad and Wall streets, as jammed as Broadway, and as unvarnished as Coney Island. Finding everything in sight is high-powered and sweating, they declare nothing is slowly-geared and leisurely.

So I went out to try to discover an oasis. The thing to do, obviously, was to find a place as different as possible from the great military establishment in the Commerce Building. Where to go? The National Museum came to mind; but that was too obvious a suggestion, since a museum, by its very nature, is a place of sleep.

Where else? Strange, almost all the other great department buildings were housing some sort of emergency organization; therefore they were not eligible as oases in the governmental sandstorm. I walked past the War Department, and all those phrases about the Commerce Building being "the G. H. Q. of the recovery front" came back to mind.

Just to see what an actual army headquarters was like, I walked in. After all, and despite all the war talk, the Commerce Building was really only the center of the activities of peace; here was the center of the activities of war.

I walked down the long corridors with their lofty ceilings, and suddenly became conscious of the loudness of my footfalls: the whole place seemed to be hushed, and suspended in a great calm. I seemed like a violator, an unwelcome intruder from the maddening crowd far outside. The tall, white woodwork, the old panels and carved mouldings, the faded portraits, the curious swinging shutter-doors, the polite old Negroes sitting at little hall desks—all of these things combined to make an impression of strange remoteness.

The impression reminded me of something I had seen before, somewhere. And then, finally, as I turned a corner, it came to me; why, this whole interior was nothing but an enlarged version of some old Southern mansion, rambling in the rich countryside of the Carolinas.

Of course! The portraits, the Negroes, the spacious white walls, the coolness after the heat—it was all as it should be; the only thing I missed was to overhear, from a corner room, one fine old gentleman saying to another: "Cuhnel Oglethorpe, how's that filly foal of yours lookin' these days?"

Suddenly, as I kept walking along, I heard the clink of glasses. Ha! I thought, the place must be authentic; George is busy fixing the mint juleps! But as I came nearer, I found it was only several clerks drinking iced tea at a lunch counter. It was a shock.

Yet I had found the oasis. It was a paradox that this warlike department should be the abode of peace, while that other department, patron of peaceful enterprise, should be like an army encampment. The only thing in this department that seemed to have any obnoxious warlike connotation was the style in which its exterior was built—one which is referred to by modern architects as the "General Grant style."

Only on getting back into the Commerce building after this singular contact with old Southern customs, could I feel the enormity of the difference. Here there were no chandeliers, no carvings, no obsequious ushers, and no clink of any sort of glasses, so far as I could hear. In such a building, so businesslike, so efficient, so stripped for action, one couldn't very well help becoming an organizer.

But suppose now that at the end of this June the positions had been reversed; that it was the War Department that tenanted the shiny new structure on Fifteenth street, and the Commerce Department that held the old cumbersome establishment west of the White House. The NRA people, of course, would have had to move in with the Commerce crowd—otherwise the suggestion of military dictatorship would have been too plain.

What then? What would have happened to the organizers, the labor chiefs, the sweating experts and darting stenographers? I dread to think. One thing is certain, they would all have slowed up.

They never could have turned to and produced those multi-colored "Code Progress Boards" and Hearing Charts that decorate the Commerce walls. Soothed by the old building, they never could have evolved the devilish agility to think up things like that. Their tempo would have become leisurely and refined—even as that of the State Department.

They would have taken on a definitely Southern charm, which might have changed the whole course of the NRA. They would have asked two hours for lunch, instead of taking 20 minutes; and they might have dreamed of siestas to follow.

They might even—goodness knows—have turned to mint juleps. Who can tell? Everything, after all, depends on your environment.

Civil Service Post Sought By Campbell

Five Now Applying for Commission Position Left by Wales.

Latest to file is Guy E. Campbell, former representative from Pennsylvania. Others are James G. Yaden, William H. McReynolds, Howard Sutherland and Thomas Campbell, former commission president.

Campbell is listed by the Congressional Directory as Republican, but his biographical note in Who's Who says he was nominated by both Democratic and Republican parties in his district.

The new board member must be Republican under civil service law.

Yaden, president of the District Federation of Citizens Associations, is now chief of the examining division of the commission. McReynolds, now assistant to the governor of the Farm Credit Administration, was director of classification of the Personnel Classification Board until it was merged into the Civil Service Commission last summer.

Sutherland was formerly Alien Property Custodian, and before that served as senator from West Virginia. Campbell resigned from the commission shortly after the Democratic broom began sweeping.

Mrs. Norton wore blue and Mrs. Webb wore pink, with turbans to match. Both carried pink roses and blue delphinium.

The ushers were Mr. John J. Slattery, Mr. Frank J. Slattery and Mr. Edward J. Slattery, brothers of the bride, and Mr. Charles Webb.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. John J. Slattery, who wore a gown of mauve chiffon and black lace, and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. C. Turvey, mother of the bridegroom, wore a navy blue chiffon gown and a corsage of pink tea roses.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Japanese Sleeping Sickness.

The present epidemic of sleeping sickness, while it differs in many particulars from similar outbreaks in this country and Europe, seems to be of a type that has appeared periodically in Japan since 1871.

The disease seems to be similar to the Japanese disease clinically, in that it causes about the same symptoms and runs about the same course; pathologically, in that the changes in the brain appear to be similar; epidemiologically, in that the outbreak came at the right season of the year and seems to be acting otherwise as the Japanese outbreaks have done.

In these oriental epidemices the disease began in July or August—the latter, in most instances—and subsided in September, October, or November—the latter, in most cases. The length of the outbreak has usually been two and a half months. If this one follows the Japanese example, October should witness considerable improvement, and early in November there should be a return to something approximating normal.

This type of the disease falls heaviest on people of middle age and beyond. Children and young adults enjoy considerable freedom from danger. It involves the brain generally, and the membranes that cover it more than is the case with the disease as it is better known to us. One consequence of this is a lack of the paralysis agitans, change in personality, and other symptoms which persisted for years in the wake of the disease of the other type. This year the disease seems to have a motality rate of about 12 per cent, but those who recover have a fairly brief convalescence and final restoration to health.

At the time this is written the disease is fairly prevalent in the territory within a radius of 200 miles of St. Louis. It behaves so differently from the disorder which the physicians commonly call sleeping sickness that its true nature is not at first suspected. Most of the cases at first are suspected of being typhoid fever, and the blood is examined for Widal reaction. Some of the cases are given the fantastic diagnosis, intestinal flu. The only laboratory test which helps establish the diagnosis is spinal puncture, followed by examination of the spinal fluid.

Sally, Plaything of President's Daughter, Receives Visitors

Visitors to the national headquarters of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America in historic Dumbarton House in Georgetown make the acquaintance of Sally, the most aristocratic doll in America. Sally was the White House playmate of the first girl born in the White House, Mary Louisa Adams, granddaughter of President John Quincy Adams. Sally is not only a real link with the little girls of the past and those of today, but an example of the dainty needle craft in which the ladies of the early days of the Republic were adept. This doll was entirely made by hand, cut from cloth and painted afterwards by the great aunt of the little White House girl, Mrs. Thomas Boyston Adams. Sally is now the property of Miss Louisa Adams Clement, who loaned it to the exhibit at Dumbarton House.

Another important doll on exhibition in Washington is the one contributed by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the President, to the doll collection of the exhibit of costumes at the new National Museum. This doll, which was the delight of Mrs. Roosevelt when she was a little girl, has grown up clothes. It has huge bustles, trains, fitted basques and hats that have a nineteenth century character. Of course, every article of the extensive wardrobe of this doll is hand made. Silk and satin dresses and fine muslin ones are important features of this collection.

Sweet Scented Moth Destroyer Does the Trick

Now Those Pests Can Be Exterminated Without Offensive Aroma.

By Ruth Anne Davis

The little moths which delight in wreaking such havoc in your wardrobe often establish permanent domains in your closet because you dread the strong aroma of most insect destroyers. Even if you use a kind which attaches itself only to the room its used in and doesn't permeate the house, you know very well when you take your clothes from the closet you will find they have annexed a decided odor. Consequently the little moths are left to revel in the furs and woolens.

Now, however, you can buy a sweet scented moth destroyer, with the fragrance of cedar, orange blossoms, or violets. You simply hang this in the closet and let it evaporate.

It's true of card table covers, just as it is of dresses—you can't have too many of them. Whereas you may not change your tables as often as you'd like, you can change the cover. A downtown store has some extremely attractive ones of a new celophane treated fabric which may be washed off easily and kept looking spic and span. Along with these come coasters to match. You may take your choice—red, blue, green or brown, 75 cents to $1.

Summer clothes require the wash tub, but winter ones may be kept presentable with careful use of a clothes brush. In many cases it is the dust which accumulates in them that finally necessitates their being sent to a cleaner. If you would make it a habit to give your suits and dress a thorough brushing before and after wearing, you'll find they maintain their fresh, new look much longer.

An F street store has an ideal brush for such usage. It's a palmetto whisk broom with a durable fiber, and a silky texture that in no way injures your clothes. For 50 cents it's a splendid buy.

An experienced traveler never will leave home without sewing equipment to keep her wardrobe in trim. There's no rhyme nor reason to the way hose run and if we're caught without a needle and thread there's no stopping that run. As for buttons, they drop off with no forewarning. With handy equipment you can remedy the situation easily.

A G street store has some little sewing kits, which include pins, needles, scissors, darning thread and clothes pins and line. It comes in pocket size. It's made up in brown, black, or blue moire, so you can appreciate its appearance as well as its utilitarian qualities.

Bright touches of color are essential to a smart fall outfit. It may be the pompoms on your hat, your gloves, your beads, your bracelet, or it may be the scarf around your neck. And don't forget—when you're choosing a scarf pick the most brilliant shades of reds, greens, blues and yellows. Let them mingle, mix and run amuck. Let them scamper up and down in stripes, or crisscross in checks or plaids.

A downtown store has a striking array of imported scarfs. You can buy them in all kinds of fabrics, sizes and designs. And they're only 69 cents.

Nothing can mar an evening like a shiny nose. And yet nothing may so easily guarded against. Remember when you're dressing for a dance that half the effect of that ultra ultra frock is going to be taken away unless you do something about a shiny nose. And, of course, if you're going to take measures against that, you might as well go all the way and apply powder to your arms, shoulders, back and neck that will stick with you the whole evening through. A Connecticut avenue shop has a liquid powder that will do the job. It comes in all shades.

It isn't an inexpensive powder, but it's one you can depend on to give you an undeniable look of elegance.

A water softener which can be used also as a sachet is a thing to inquire about. Some people whose skins are sensitive to hard water will find that by using this softener they can alleviate discomfort. They also will find that its fragrance will make baths or mere handwashings a pleasure. An ordinary package is 39 cents, but you can buy five pounds for 69 cents.

The shopper who is more interested in jelly glasses than fragrant water softeners may be glad to hear that a G street store has some on sale, three for 10 cents, or 30 cents a dozen. These come in several sizes and shapes so it's two to one she can find what she wants in the lot.

While she's there, let her see those potato mashers or potato ricers as some people call them. Lumpy mashed potatoes are next to overcooked peas and, where there might be some excuse for the last, with these mashers on sale for 25 cents, there's no excuse for the first.

Stew Becomes a Regal Dish in Any Land

Well-Prepared Concoctions Take Rank With Most Expensive and Elaborate Preparations; Four Suggestions Are Provided.

Take a meat stew that's cooked to perfection. That is—simmered a long time, till the meat will fall apart at the touch of a fork; and meat, vegetables and seasonings are blended into one grand harmony of flavor. That's an honored dish in any language.

Even among such epicures as Oscar of the Waldorf, a well-made stew takes rank with the most elaborate and expensive dishes. And well made means principally cooked slowly. The word stew itself means to cook slowly in a small amount of water. Particularly if you use the less expensive (but better flavored) cuts of meat for your stews, you'll need to cook them long and gently to make them tender.

Fun to Make.

Aside from that, there simply are no rules for the kind of meat and vegetables to use. It's all a matter of taste and habit. For example, Irish stew calls for either lamb or mutton, and hot, riced potato (not flour) for thickening. Russian stew (Boeuf Kroganoff, named for the nobleman who originated it) calls for beef, seasoning of sour cream and a side dish of Julienne potato. Hungarian goulash is, of course, pepped up with paprika. Stews of the Latin nations are seasoned subtly with olive oil. East Indian stews with curry, the famouse Japanese Sukiyaki with soy bean sauce.

There you are. For sheer, gorgeous adventure in cooking, I can't think of anything that would be more fun than to make them all!

Irish Stew.

First, our old friend, Irish stew—which may be no news to you, but elegant eating, anyway. Start this with 2 pounds of lamb or mutton shoulder, cut in 2-inch cubes. Put this in a heavy pot with barely enough boiling water (about 3 cups) to cover. Cook slowly till meat is about three-quarters done (maybe 2 hours). Then add 2 cups of whole, small onions, 2 cups of sliced carrots (or whole baby carrots) and simmer till both meat and vegetables are tender. Next add 1½ teaspoons salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Then stir in 3 cups of hot, riced potato. Turn the stew into a serving dish and sprinkle over it 2 tablespoons minced parsley.

Hungarian Goulash.

For that famous Hungarian goulash you need, first, 1 pound of lean veal and ½ pound lean beef (cut in small cubes), 2 tablespoons fat and 1 cup sliced onions. Melt fat, and lightly brown onions in it. Then remove onions and brown meat thoroughly. Next, put onions and meat in a baking dish, add 1 teaspoon paprika and 3½ cups boiling water. Cover dish and cook in oven at 350 degrees till meat is almost done (about 1½ hours). Then add 1 small bay leaf, 1 whole clove and 1½ teaspoons salt. Mix 4 tablespoons flour, smooth with a little cold water and add this, too. Cover again and let simmer at least 30 minutes more. Serve with boiled potatoes, carrots and turnips—cooked separately, if you want the real Hungarian touch. But for an easier method, slice these vegetables into the stew when you add the seasonings. Also, use ¼ cup chopped green pepper if you like.

Mexican Lamb Stew.

Here's a glorious hodge-podge as Mexicans like it. First take 1 pound lamb (neck or boned shoulder) and cut it in 1-inch pieces. Roll these in flour (about 4 tablespoons) and brown them in hot fat or meat dripping (about 2 tablespoons). Then to this add 1-3 cup chopped onions, 1½ cups chopped fresh (or canned) tomatoes, 2-3 cup chopped green peppers. Cook all together 5 minutes. Then add 4 cups boiling water, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, and simmer gently 1 hour. Next, add ½ cup uncooked, washed rice, and cook 20 minutes. Finally, drop in 1 cup peas and 1 cup corn (fresh or canned), and cook just till every ingredient is tender. Now the final touch—when ready to serve, beat up 1 egg with 1 tablespoon olive oil and ½ tablespoon vinegar in serving dish, pour the hot stew over this. Then ring the dinner bell quick!

Whole Wheat Dumplings.

In the small space remaining, I want to recommend that you treat yourself with whole wheat dumplings in the next veal, lamb or mutton stew you make. Like this: Mix and sift 1½ cups whole wheat flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Add just enough milk to make a drop dough (about 2-3 cup). Quickly drop dumplings off spoon into boiling stew. Clap cover on kettle and keep it on for 12 minutes. Serve at once, around stew.

Send for More Recipes.

Now if you haven't found right here the particular stew recipes you want, I hope you'll find them in my newest bulletin, "Meat Stews of Many Lands." This bulletin has in it all the stews mentioned in this article, and others besides. Send 6 cents in loose stamps with self-addressed envelope and coupon below.

What Today Means

"Libra."

If September 26 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10:15 a. m., from 3:30 to 4 p. m. and from 10 to 10:30 p. m.

You may feel inclined on this day to put something over on the other fellow, but reason will tell you not to; listen to reason, or serious consequences will ensue. People's thought will turn to travel, and many a quick trip will result and bring great joy and happiness. Influences will tend to keep people out of danger.

The child born on this September 26 will hold his own in any group of children his own age. You will not find him forward, but you will find him quick to defend himself and not the type to give in even an inch. These children are quick to see danger, but do not become panicky. Straightforward little ones.

If September 26 is the date of your birth, you are probably not the type of person who sits down and reasons his way out of a difficult situation; rather, are you inclined to fight your way out and get what you want. Compromise is almost impossible to you; you would rather have your own way in toto, or else get out of the picture. People like you because of your bold frankness, but they fear you, too. It is difficult for you to subordinate yourself to another, and when you have to work under any one else, you find it irksome, to say the least. You are a very tolerant and understanding person, slow to condemn another. To give the "down and outer" a helping hand is something you never fail to do when given the opportunity.

Born on September 26, you will more than likely have a life that is full of ups and downs. Your fortune will be made and lost on more than one occasion, and it will be up to fate alone to decide whether you will die a rich or poor person. You are full of hope and as long as there is a breath of life in you, you do not minimize your chances to put over a really big deal. You have ideas of an unusual and original nature and it would be not at all surprising to see you invent something of importance. Money means not a great deal to you; you spend freely and give freely to those less fortunate than yourself. In business matters, however, you are a hard one to beat; you count your nickels and make them work for you then. You may err in choosing a mate.

Stephen B. Elkins, lawyer and politician.

The Family Marketer

Oyster Plant Is Latest Addition to Capital's Vegetable Market.

The latest addition to the vegetable market is the oyster plant, so called because of its oyster flavor. Some people know it better by the name salsify. You can buy it now for 15 cents a bunch, although later in the season it probably will sell for less.

There are several ways of preparing the oyster plants which make them delicious variations for your menu. Perhaps they are most commonly served mashed. You boil them first, mash well and fry in plenty of hot fat. Drain, salt and dress with a bunch of parsley on top.

Here's Another Idea.

If you prefer something quite out of the ordinary, try salsify a la poulette. Scrape some oyster plants to remove their covering of brown skin, cut off the tops and thin end parts. Throw them as quickly as they are done in cold water acidulated with vinegar; divide them into 2½-inch lengths and cook in a white stock into which add chopped beef, kidney suet and sliced lemon pulp. Let cook slowly and when they crush under the pressure of the finger, drain. Saute them colorless in butter. Season, drain off the fat and put in a little veloute. Roll them in the sautoir and thicken with egg yolks and butter, finishing with lemon juice and chopped parsley.

Spinach, Broccoli Up.

The recent hot spell has served to push the price of spinach and broccoli. Both of them require cool weather for shipping purposes and tend to spoil rapidly with the heat. Spinach is being shipped in from New Jersey, packed in crushed ice and is placed on the market for 15 cents a pound. As soon as the home-grown crop arrives, the price undoubtedly will take a drastic drop. That crop would be in now except for the storm a month ago.

Choice broccoli is selling two pounds for 25 cents. However, with the advent of cool weather it will be decidedly less precious. That should be good news to many because, according to produce dealers, it has risen steadily in popularity since its debut here a few years ago.

Lima Beans Gone.

Despite the fact the chain stores boast a line-up of practically every seasonable vegetable today, lima beans are conspicuously absent. And there's a good reason. They finally have become so poor in quality and so outrageously high in price that marketers ostracized them.

But the gap is well filled by string beans, which seem to be here in abundance today. The large ones are selling three pounds for 19 cents and the small ones 10 cents a pound. If you plan to cook them a long time and season them well with fat meat, the larger ones will answer your purpose. If you cook them only a short while, as dietitians suggest, and serve them with salt and butter, the smaller ones will be much better.

Homegrown tomatoes today sell, two pounds for 15 cents, those from California, three pounds for 25 cents. However, dealers say that toward the end of the week they expect quite a supply from nearby Maryland, which will pull the price down considerably. Most of the locals are gone, but, with favorable weather conditions, there should be one more crop, and then the coast is clear for California shipments.

Leaders Tell Women How To Help NRA

Rank and File Urged to Report Code Dodging by Business Firms.

American women can aid the recovery program by listening to and reporting the complaints of the milkman, the grocery clerk, the manicurist—by forming themselves into Vigilance Committees. This is the gist of advice for helping enforce the NRA as given by prominent women leaders of six Nation-wide organizations in the October Good Housekeeping.

Because Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA Administrator, has said "women must carry the whole weight of President Roosevelt's war against depression," these women leaders were asked to make suggestions.

Miss Lucy Randolph Mason, general secretary of the National Consumers' League, says:

"Women may help in enforcement by observing what is going on right around them in their own communities and the contacts which they have in their housekeeping with the milkman, the grocery clerks and the employes in department stores. Through their cooperation many violations may be brought to light. Women's clubs should use the organizations they already have to form Vigilance Committees in their own communities."

Calls For Courage.

Miss Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the National Council of Women and the International Federation of Business and Professional Women:

"Women should be courageous enough to report to the proper authorities any infringements of the plan.

"At the International Congress in Chicago under the auspices of the National Council of Women, we voted to ask women's organizations to constitute themselves into Vigilance Committees to see that the act is enforced.

"I hope, however, that women will not stop there. I want to see them use their efforts to put out of office any officials who obstruct the operation of this act."

"Y" Leader Gives Views.

Mrs. Frederic M. Paist, president of the National Y. W. C. A.:

"Women have more than a personal part to play in this program. Some of them are employers and many are working on a slender margin of profit with limited capital, so it will take high courage and intelligence to play their part. Women also are on the directing boards and committees of institutions which have a pay roll. These institutions have felt the strain of economic pressure and, unless great care is taken, we shall see the strange phenomenon of philanthropic institutions with pay rolls which are not up to the standards of the code!"

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs:

"Every woman belongs to the consumer group and has an important part to play by supporting those business concerns which are living up to the provisions of the new industrial codes or have signed the President's agreement to raise wages and spread employment."

Urges Bridge Game Forum.

Mrs. Gertrude Folks Zimand, director of research of the National Child Labor Committee:

"Familarize yourself with the hour and wage and child labor provisions of those industries with which you come personally in contact.

"The bridge party has been accused of being the place where women pass on news of 'special bargains.' Let it now become the center for arousing interest in the NRA program and for spreading the news of firms which are obeying or disobeying the agreements."

Choose Dessert That Meets Need Of Whole Family

Probably no food is regarded more gratefully by the mother of a family of graduated ages than that which is not only delectable but equally nourishing and digestible for all.

Under this head somes prune or apricot mousse. It may provide one of the principal dishes for a light lunch, or it can be nicely used as a dessert with dinner.

To make it, use one cup double cream, one cup prune or apricot pulp, two egg whites, a pinch of salt and sugar to taste.

To make the prune pulp, cook one-quarter pound of prunes with a little lemon peel in one and a half cups of water until soft, rub through a strainer and add four tablespoons of sugar and two tablespoons of lemon juice. For apricot pulp, cook one-fourth of a pound of dried apricots in one and a half cups of water, rub, through a strainer and add enough sugar to fill the cup.

Mix as for other fruit mousses. One-half teaspoon of gelatin may be added, if needed to thicken the pulp.

What's in Fashion?

Newest Fashions Become Short Women

Directed by Amos Parrish

Information as to where styles of the type illustrated and their variations are available in Washington will be given by the Fashion Department, The Washington Post, on request.

What a break for the short woman this fall! The new fashions are her best fashions. The trend toward moderation and modification in silhouette and details . . . these are things that have long been the bywords of her fashion code.

She doesn't need to worry about fullness through the bodice, because the chesty look is the right look. Easy-fitting waists and straight-line skirts have always been most becoming to her. And sleeves that fit snugly through forearms and wrists are one of the best helps we know of for making hips look slimmer.

Coat Dress Flatters.

Take that dress sketched at the left in the illustration. The kind of dress that every smart woman, short or tall, is wearing this fall. A wrap-around coat dress with surplice waist. Soft fullness in the upper part of the sleeves. Yet if we'd been especially designing a dress for the short, stoutish woman, we couldn't have done better.

The surplice and the line of the skirt opening are slimming and heightening. The fullness at the top has a reducing effect on too-large hips.

Flat Furs Good.

The new coats will make the short woman equally happy . . . and up-to-fashion. The sleek and short curly furs are having a big run . . . and those are precisely what she wears best. Made in rever shawls, like the one sketched, and in jabot and square shawls. In pouch collars with tied ends, combined with fur appliques on the top of sleeves. And in fan-shaped scarfs.

Even the materials do well by her. If she likes them rough, she can have ribbed boucle, with the ribs going up and down in subtly slenderizing fashion. If she prefers to keep to smooth ones, there are the new suedes and broadcloaths that are so soft and unbulky.

Write for Leaflet.

We're so enthusiastic over all the new things that the short woman can wear so becomingly . . . and so afraid that in some cases she'll spoil the effect with some small detail . . . we've prepared a special leaflet with all the can's and can't's lined up. It will be sent you as soon as we receive the filled-in coupon and inclosures.

They Were, Indeed, The Perfect Hosts

Belmonts Undisturbed When Guests Dressed as Flunkies.

In the days before the depression, the Perry Belmonts entertained lavishly and the guests were greeted at the mansion by a score of flunkies resplendent in crimson knee-length uniforms and powdered hair.

A new official and his wife were invited to dinner and when Mrs. Official saw the imposing greeters she would not go in and, returning rapidly to her home, donned fancy dress and pushed down over the brow of her protesting husband a beautiful powdered wig.

When they returned to the Belmonts and were ushered into the drawing room, where the rest of the guests had assembled in formal evening dress, everybody gasped except Mr. and Mrs. Belmont, the perfect hosts. They made no comment whatever.

100 Topics Set For Chicago Legion Session

Bonus Is Seen Figuring Only Lightly at Convention.

Chicago, Sept. 25 (AP).—An agenda of 100 subjects ranging from disability payments to fighting crime was announced tonight for the American Legion's national convention in Chicago next week.

National officials of the Legion expressed a belief that demands for payment of the bonus would enter the program only slightly.

They said a resolution asking "payment of the adjusted service certificates as soon as Governmental finances permit" probably would be adopted.

The program calls for adequate hospitalization, care of widows and orphans and replacement of the 25 per cent cut in disability allowances made last March.

Demand Hines' Removal.

Removal of Gen. Frank T. Hines as director of the Veterans' Bureau at Washington has been demanded in several State conventions, while at least one State has recommended he be retained.

Under the heading of Americanism will come a resolution opposing United States recognition of Soviet Russia.

A majority of the State departments have expressed sympathy with the aims and principles of the National Recovery act

200,000 at Convention.

With an expected attendance of 200,000 the legionnaires and auxiliary members, city officials plan emergency traffic handling, especially for the legion's parade of 150,000, with 50 bands and drum and bugle corps, Tuesday.

Two additional names were added by arriving legion officials to the list of five candidates for national commander. The list now includes Ray Murphy, of Ida Grove, Iowa; George W. Malone, of Carson City, Nev.; Vilas Whaling, of Racine, Wis.; Ed Hayes, of Decatur, Ill.; Lyon W. Brandon, of Como, Miss.; Samuel Reynolds, of Omaha, Nebr., and Gen. Milton A. Reckord, of Baltimore, Ohio.

"Boots" Mallory, "Bill" Cagney Wed

Actress Divorced Bennett "Recently," She Says.

Hollywood, Sept. 25 (AP).—Patricia (Boots Mallory and William ("Bill") Cagney, movie players, were married Saturday at Agua Caliente, Mexico, she said today.

Bennett said he and the actress, on August 15, 1928, agreed to enter into marital relationship, permanent and exclusive of all others."

The couple separated last February 8.

Court records show Bennett's case was marked off the calendar on last May 16.

Miss Mallory said: "I got an annulment of my marriage with Mr. Bennett in New York, recently, and that's that."

Gunmen Fight Off Federal Dry Squad

Prohibition Agents Face Submachine Barrage.

Collinsville, Ill., Sept. 25 (AP).—Gunmen fought off Federal prohibition agents and escaped by motor car with three prisoners arrested in a raid on a still here late today.

The officers were fired upon with a submachine gun, but none was injured. The motor car of one agent was damaged by seven slugs.

The agents said they found a huge still in a barn and arrested three men. Two machines drove up. Their occupants slugged one agent with a shot gun and then began firing.

"Kidnaped" Son Taken by Father

Seizes Boy Previously Held by Mother.

Cincinnati, Sept. 25 (AP).—Harold Randall, Buffalo, N. Y., reported to Domestic Relations Court today that he had "kidnaped" his 9-year-old son and was departing immediately for Buffalo, where a court, papers he displayed showed, had awarded him custody of the child.

The boy, he said, had been here since shortly after Mrs. Lillian F Randall, 28, similarly seized him in Buffalo two years ago. They have been disputing custody since.

Shouse Aid Resigns; Joins Distillers Body

Resignation of Robert Barry as vice president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, effective October 1, to accept an executive position with the National Distillers Products Corporation in New York, was announced yesterday by Jouett Shouse, president of that organization.

Since last November Barry has been assistant to Shouse, and in charge of publicity for the association.

Rainey Sees No Need Of Congress Session

Chicago, Sept. 25 (AP).—Speaker Henry T. Rainey, (Democrat), Illinois today said broad emergency powers granted the President make a special session of Congress unnecessary.

-:- Radio Waves and Ripples -:-

THAT inauguration of Ed Wynn's Amalgamated Broadcasting System went on over at WOL last night. And on and on and on.

Few listeners in these parts can remember such a multitude of performers, such an array of talent. There was all manner of music-making. There were crooners, there were torch singers. And then there were voices not improperly classified as operatic. Then there were speeches.

The speeches, some of them, were WOL's contribution to the festivities. Postmaster General Farley, Representative Sol Bloom and Judge Sykes, of the Radio Commission, were in the Annapolis Hotel studio early, and went on as scheduled at 8:45 with messages of good wishes.

Names of many of the performers may have been unfamiliar to a large number of Washington listeners, but this department ventures the guess that that condition will not endure long. Put in this category such local show people as George Emmons, Elizabeth Gardner Coombs and Joseph Bruno, and Chain Performer James Rich and that Amalgamated choir.

And so today WOL works on a 17-hour daily schedule, much as the other Washington studios, and the third broadcasting system becomes a reality.

The quarter hour ordinarily used by the Postilion broadcaster was granted last night by The Washington Post to the speakers at the banquet given to the Washington Baseball Club at which Postmaster General Farley, Senator Pat Harrison, and other notables were distinguished guests. Our listeners, therefore, did not hear The Post's usual and prepared program. The Postilion will be back on the air tonight with its offering of news events.

Whitecaps Tonight.

WJSV—The Mills Brothers, 7:30; Boswell Sisters, 8; Nino Martini, 9:30; Howard Barlow Orchestra, 11. WMAL—Beethoven, 9:30; Club Michel Orchestra, 10:15; Ernie Holst, 11:30. WRC — Blackstone Plantation, 8; Lady Esther's Serenade, 8:30; Fire Chief, 9:30.

Commissioner Landis came through with the World Series broadcast approval for Columbia yesterday. Ted Husing probably will be at the microphone.

And on October 2, the day before the series opens in New York, Columbia will return its "Man in the Street" idea to the air to find out what the people in Washington, New York and Philadelphia think of the chances of either club to win.

Shortly after 2 o'clock in the afternoon, WJSV's Robert Trout will be parked with a microphone on F street, asking Washingtonians why they believe the Nats will win. A New York announcer already will have asked the people along Times Square why they like the Giants. Columbia will interview Philadelphians, hoping for nonpartisan opinion.

Washington's Frank Shannon has rigged up a new show which WMAL will radio tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. He's calling it "Four Jacks and a Joker." Yesterday he needed a jack and the joker to fill, or maybe it was only two jacks. At any rate, George Reid, the one-man minstrel, and Charles Hellinger have agreed to help. Shannon is a brother of Grace Shannon, one of WJSV's Three Maids.

The NBC minds have decided that WRC has been allowed the midnight to 1 a. m. broadcast long enough. It's WMAL's turn now, beginning last night.

WRC-WMAL Announcer Jim McGrath always was proud of Juniper, that undersized auto of his.

Several evenings ago McGrath in his car pushed Assistant N. B. C. Manager Fred Shawn in his big, powerful roadster about town for nearly an hour before Shawn's car started.

Now McGrath's a lot prouder.

WJSV's Sun Dial personnel has been changed entirely. Just so you won't be confused, the announcer now is Robert Longstreet. The fellow he talks to is a normally taciturn engineer by the name of Donald Mehaffey. Clyde Hunt, who used to work with Robert Trout, has too many other things to do.

One-time Washington Announcer Frank Young puts on another new WMAL show tomorrow night at 8:45 under the title, "Two Pianos and a Girl." Frank would like it if you tuned in.

Those Three Maids are fond of the singing Boswells. They look up to them and all that. That's why Connie, Helvetia and Martha are going out to the Maids' home for supper tonight.

Besides President Roosevelt, Labor Secretary Frances Perkins, Postmaster General Farley and Senator Wagner will microphone speeches from the National Conference of Catholic Charities in New York next month.

Rubinoff, they say, is thinking of rigging up his violin with some kind of shield . . . just in case Jimmy Durante starts breathing heavily through the nose again . . . some one called George Olsen suave . . . George heard it . . . "Aw, cut it out," he is quoted as saying, "People will think I'm either a Czecho Suave or a Jugo Suave when I'm really a Swede." . . . N. B. C. radios the last installment of "Death on the Five-Yard Line" tomorrow night . . . Boy! . . . Sing Sing's Warden Lewis Lawes will be back on the air October 11 at 9 p. m. . . . Pilot Al Williams has been picked by N. B. C. to report the National Air Pageant at Roosevelt Field October 7 . . . Williams will do some stunting that day himself. . . . a radio press agent writes: "If you were a fugitive from a chain gang whose former sweetheart threatened to turn you in if you did not marry her, would you marry her or go back to the chain gang?" . . . that's easy.

Reading Psychics.

The craze for psychics has passed its peak unquestionably, but occasionally an expert used them for effect. Ability to read psychic bidding is one of the tests of an expert, but there are situations when it is difficult to take action at a particular moment. Such a case is one where Third Hand, not vulnerable, opens the bidding, and the player yet to speak has a fairly strong hand but is wholly unprepared for the response that appears most probable from the partner.

Recently in a Rubber game at Crockford's Club, New York, the hand below was dealt. Three of the players were acknowledged experts. The fourth member of the quartet was perhaps not a member of that sacred class, but ranked as a really very good player. The hand was:

South, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | Pass | 1♣(1) | Pass(2) |
| 1♠(3) | Pass | Pass(4) | Pass(5) |

1—An out-and-out psychic.
2—East has a very nice hand, but the obvious response, if a Take-out Double is made, would be in spades. Vulnerable, the risk of a penalty is too great, as East has no safe suit to bid at the range of two or three.
3—A perfectly natural response.
4—Possibly North should protect his psychic by bidding two spades, but he reasoned that if East could take no affirmative action on the first round there was slight probability of any action at this point.
5—East should now double. North and South, not vulnerable, have permitted the bidding to die at a contract of one-odd. Obviously the combined hands are weak.

As it turned out, South played the hand at one spade and made two spades. East and West could have made five hearts or five diamonds. The North and South players, Messrs. Howard Schenken and Raymond Balfe, must be given credit for a very successful psychic. However, despite their success in this particular instance, they lost a very large rubber to their opponents.

Tomorrow's Hand.

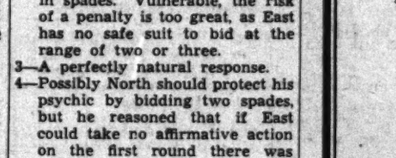
If South is playing a contract of four spades, what play should he make after West wins the first trick with the heart Ace, and the Dummy wins the second trick with the Ace of clubs?

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Brewer's Bribe Called Rumor In State Quiz

Legislator Asserts Talk of $25,000 Fund Was Misconstrued.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 25 (AP).—Delving into charges by the president of the State Senate that brewery interests raised a $25,000 "slush fund" to influence beer legislation, a Legislative committee today heard two witnesses trace the basis of the allegations to a cafe conversation of Assemblyman F. Stanley Bleakly, of the State beer commission.

One of the witnesses, Oliver J. West, former county clerk of Gloucester and a Republican county leader, asserted Bleakly had intimated the money had been given Jesse R. Salmon, 71-year-old Essex Republican leader. The other, Neil Deighan, president of the New Jersey Licensed Beverage Retail Dealers Association, said Bleakly had spoken of $25,000, but did not say in his presence who received it.

Bleakly, taking the stand late in the day, said, "I admit meeting these witnesses and mention of the $25,000, but I never mentioned salmon. It has been said generally and joked about all spring."

Charging his talk had been "garbled," Bleakly asserted Deighan had asked "What about this $25,000?" and he replied, "I said it was nothing more than rumor in the Legislature."

"The witnesses have garbled the words I said to them and used them in the interest of the man who wanted this investigation," he said. "This is not an inquiry. It's a political determination of who are the leaders and I am the goat."

Salmon, who was still to be called as a witness, has branded in a public statement the charge as "maliciously false."

Girls Gaining

Population Here Increases Fast, Says Y. W. C. A.

A total of 365 girls and women applied for rooms during August, Miss Virginia Carter Wingfield, in charge of the service, reports, and the number during September is expected to be even greater.

Soviet Capital Gives Welcome To Lindberghs

Thousands Line Moscow River as American Fliers Arrive.

Moscow, Sept. 25 (AP).—Applauded by thousands lining the waterfront and bridges of the narrow Moscow River, Col. Charles Lindbergh brought his transatlantic hydroplane to a perfect landing on the dangerously limited surface today after an overland flight from Leningrad.

With Mrs. Lindbergh he received greetings of civil aviation officials, attended a banquet in their honor, and then went to the opera.

Two Soviet planes escorted Lindbergh as he approached the city. He circled about the landing point three times, coming down on the unruffled river a half mile below the historic Kremlin.

At a nearby water station the American couple was welcomed by high officials, civil aircraft representatives, and members of the domestic and foreign press.

As the large plane taxied in a leisurely way to the landing float of the Dynamo Boat Club the spectators paid tribute in spontaneous applause. Lndbergh waved his hand in response.

A group of veteran Soviet pilots joined in the welcome. Behind a motorcycle escort Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh were driven to the National Hotel. They are expected to remain in Moscow several days.

Chevy Chase Group Meets.

Election of officers will feature the annual meeting of Section 8, Chevy Chase (Md.) Citizens Association tonight at 8 o'clock in Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. E. A. Drake is president.

Building Rise Is Expected by Bankers Here

Goodbody & Company See Boom Nearing, With Homes in Lead.

A boom in the construction of homes and smaller multiple family dwellings is anticipated by Goodbody & Co., with local offices. For some time the company has been giving consideration to what groups of stock would be leaders in the 1934 bull market.

As early as last spring, it suggested a residential boom would probably materialize in this inflationary period and has continued to mention it in advices since then.

In a recent letter, the company states "So far, we have not recommended any stocks in this group because it seemed premature. But the opinion is now beginning to spread that such a development, perhaps aided by Government subsidies or loans may be in full swing by next spring.

Stocks to Consider.

"Consequently those who like to anticipate developments well in advance should give consideration to the stocks that would be most benefited by a residential boom. We do not anticipate a large gain in the construction of large apartment houses. That field was much overdeveloped in the latter stages of the last bull market. It is in the construction of individual homes and smaller multiple family dwellings that we anticipate a boom.

A sensational increase of 43 per cent in pay roll totals for August over the corresponding month of 1932, is the high spot in the current Consumer Index, just released by Investors Syndicate with local offices. Increase in wage totals in August over July, 1933, was 11.6 per cent.

This enlarged consumer buying power was promptly reflected in retail sales, which showed a gain of 5.6 per cent over the preceding month, and 16 per cent over August, 1932.

Living Costs Rise.

A gradually strengthening price structure was responsible for a rise of 3.2 per cent in the cost of living during the month of August. The living costs index has closed up to within 2.3 per cent of the corresponding month of last year, narrowing the 12 months' spread from the 5.7 per cent difference shown between July, 1933, and July, 1932.

Automobile buying showed much less than the usual seasonal decline with a reduction of 3.9 per cent from the preceding month's volume and was more than twice the volume of August, 1932.

Less interest in the securities market was reflected in security investment totals which were down 61 per cent below the preceding month and 26.5 per cent below the totals for the corresponding month of a year ago.

After an unbroken decline of many months, life insurance sales did an about face in August, with a gain over July of 3.3 per cent and over August, 1932, of 3.1 per cent.

Foreign Markets.

Sept. 25 (A.P.).—London—Business on the Stock Exchange was generally quiet today. Speculators were still indisposed to take up fresh commitments while financial conditions in America and Europe continue uncertain. South African gold mines recovered after early weakness owing to reports that labor troubles had been settled. Wet issues improved on week-end buying from America, while transatlantic issues also were better on favorable Wall street reports. Oil shares gained and German bonds also were firmer. The market closed quiet.

Paris—Price movements on the bourse at the opening were irregular, but rentes and foreign securities later set the pace for an upward movement which affected practically everything except electric and mining issues. The closing was steady.

Berlin—The tone of the bourse was firm owing to the greater demand for bonds. Stocks closed a trifle weaker.

Stocks Decline 1.9 Points on Quiet Trading

Late Rally Fails to Halt Losses; Sales Cut to 1,304,150 Shares.

New York, Sept. 25 (A.P.).—Stocks drifted lower in quiet trading today. A late rally from early declines failed to hold and closing prices were near the lows, net losses ranging from fractions to a couple of points for the more active favorites.

With the dollar rising and week-end developments tending to confirm recent impressions that Washington has shelved currency inflation, at least for the time being, stocks lacked a stimulant and traders curtailed their activities. Volume contracted to 1,304,150 shares. Mining and metal issues, together with the alcohols, suffered most severely from the absence of speculative sponsorship; however, the general list was rather soft.

U. S. Smelting Loses.

United States Smelting lost 6 points and Homestake flopped 20. United States Industrial Alcohol, National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol, Americal Smelting, Cerro de Pasco and Alaska Juneau were down about 2 to 3. Rails dragged, New York Central and Santa Fe losing in the vicinity of 2 points. United States Steel, American Can, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, General Motors, Chrysler, Case, American Tobacco "B," Western Union and American Telephone finished 1 to 2 lower.

The dollar's advance was checked around midday and before the close of security markets its gains against foreign currencies had been reduced. Conservative sections of Wall street opinion were pleased by the administration's apparent decision to follow through with its program of the more orthodox credit expansion and by embryonic plans for liquidating frozen bank deposits. It was pointed out in some quarters that credit reservoirs might be more quickly and freely tapped if business confidence in "sound money" could be increased.

Gains in Employment.

August statistics issued by the Federal Reserve Board showed gains in employment and wages over July, but also reflected the decline in industrial production, which became well defined toward the end of last month.

There has since been some evidence that this recession was slackening, even though heavy industries are still sluggish compared with their marked vitality during the summer. One of Washington's current goals is the stimulation of these lines, and it was to this end that today's White House conference of the steel men was directed.

Railroad earnings last month were well above a year ago, but, as expected, the percentage gains of net operating income are running to much less spectacular figures than was the case for July. The first two major roads to report traffic for last week registered some improvement over the previous period.

Wool Market.

Boston, Sept. 25 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Quotations show a strengthening tendency on combing 64s and finer territory wools in original bags. Most houses ask 77 to 78 cents scoured basis on short French combing lines, 79 to 80 cents on bulk average French combing, and 80 to 81 cents on good French combing staple. Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain & Flour Exchange during the week ending September 23, amounted to 1,661,200 pounds, as compared with 899,000 during the previous week.

Confusion Over Terms

"Inflation" as Synonymous With Greater Purchasing Power Misleading

By Ralph West Robey.

From the insistence currently being made for an expansion of purchasing power through "inflation" and "credit expansion" it is obvious that there still is widespread misunderstanding of these terms. Ordinarily such confusion would be of little moment. At present, however, this is far from the case. This is because the demands of various sections of the public are to an unusual degree finding reflection in the positive actions of the administration. Unless there is a reasonably clear comprehension of the meaning of the terms used in expressing the demands, accordingly, the public may find it has asked for something it does not want. It may find, for example, that it is literally swamped with what it now is calling "purchasing power" but that buying enough food and clothing to keep body and soul together is an increasingly difficult task.

The real cause of all the misunderstanding is the word "inflation." As a matter of fact even academicians, including the score or so actively discussing the subject in the administration, employ the term in a slipshod and slovenly manner. Not only do many of them use it as more or less synonymous with an increase of purchasing power or an expansion of credit, but they go further and make it vaguely the equivalent of a rise of prices. When used in this way it is small wonder that public support is gained for "inflation," for all of us want an increase of purchasing power, an expansion of credit, and a rise of prices.

These Factors Essential To Recovery.

All of these things, in fact, are necessary concomitants of business recovery. As business improves each of them will be realized to a greater or lesser extent. We can not speed them up by inflation, however, because the kind of increase of purchasing power, credit expansion, and higher prices that results from inflation is not the kind that is essential to prosperity. This point can not be over emphasized. Because of confusion here millions of people throughout the country are supporting a program which will have just the reverse effect of what they expect, and what they really want.

Actually there is little justification for such confusion. It is perfectly obvious that what we all want is not just dollars but an ability to buy more goods. It is this ability which constitutes real purchasing power, not the particular number of dollars we have in our pockets. It is equally evident that this real purchasing power must come from the production of goods, not printing slips of paper and calling them dollars. Suppose, for example, that we all just stopped work and the Government gave each of us $1,000 a week. We quickly would starve to death, or rather would kick out the Government that misled us into thinking we could be prosperous by such means and go back to work producing real purchasing power—the goods which we consume.

Inflation Is Artificial Purchasing Power.

All inflation differs from this example only in degree. This is because it is the creation of artificial purchasing power as contrasted with purchasing power resulting from the production of goods and the giving of services. Necessarily, therefore, it can not improve the economic well-being of the country. Instead of giving us more purchasing power of the kind we want, it undermines the standard of living of the rank and file through making prices go up more rapidly than the increase in the number of dollars in pay envelopes.

This is true regardless of whether the inflation is through printing paper money or through credit expansion. What we need in this country, therefore, is not the creaton of such artificial purchasing power, but an increase of purchasing power based upon production, an expansion of credit based upon such production, and a rise of prices because a better distribution of our national income enables us to buy more goods. This is the difference between inflation, either currency or credit, and a sound expansion of purchasing power. It also is the difference between temporary and lasting business recovery.

Bond Market Drifts Lower In Dull Trading

High-Grade Issues Gain on Fiscal Policy; Sales, $9,412,000.

New York, Sept. 25 (A.P.).—Aside from some prime investment issues, bonds were hesitant today despite the dimming of inflationary flares and firming international dollar rates.

Trading turned rather dull on the obvious uneasiness of secondary groups which, as usual, trailed stocks. Sales totaled only $9,412,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans eased three-tenths of a point.

Highest grade bonds were aided by announcement from Washington that no change in the Government's fiscal policy was contemplated at this time.

Advances of fractions to around a point were held by some maturities of Santa Fe, Central Pacific, Consolidated Gas, Detroit Edison, Louisville & Nashville, National Steel, North American, Northern Pacific, Phillips Petroleum, Pure Oil, U. S. Rubber and Western Union.

Losers of similar amounts included loans of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Southern and Wabash.

St. Joseph Lead 5½s were rather active at a loss of 2 points. Some of the oils were under pressure, including Shell Pipe Line, Shell Union and Sinclair.

Other Bonds Ease.

Bonds of United Drug, American Metals, Postal Telegraph and Armour & Co. eased.

The Majority of United States Government securities closed moderately higher after early uncertainty.

Reichstag support of German domestic obligations brought a rally of 1 to 2 or more points in the Reich's dollar bonds. Other foreign issues up 1 to 3 or more included those of Australia, Austria, Colombia and Brazil. Loans of Dutch East Indies, Switzerland and France were a bit heavy.

New York, Sept. 25.—General Foods Corporation during August and early September has continued its sales gain over the same period last year, according to C. M. Chester, president.

"August sales, on a unit basis, were 20 per cent ahead of August last year," said Mr. Chester. "For the first eight months this year unit sales are close to 16 per cent ahead of the same period last year. Canadian and export sales also are running ahead of last year's volume."

Home Owners' Loan Act Aims Made Clearer

Federal Board Statement Answers Questions That Interest Public.

The principles upon which the recently created Home Owners Loan Corporation will fulfill its functions with greatest advantage to all holders of home mortgage loans eligible under the corporation's functions were outlined in a statement issued by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board here today.

Addressed to mortgage holders who now face the alternative of foreclosure or the sacrifice of past due and future interest, the statement said:

"Inquiries from many thousands of mortgage owners ask whether to accept the 4 per cent bonds of the corporation in exchange for mortgage loans in difficulty which they now hold. The board makes clear that the holder would benefit by acceptance to the extent that he would exchange an investment now yielding little or no return for well-secured bonds paying 4 per cent income, guaranteed by the United States Government, during the 18-year life of the bonds, such income being exempt from all taxes except surtaxes and estate, inheritance and gift taxes.

Question on Sales.

"A second question asked by many such holders of mortgages is whether the 4 per cent corporation bonds may be sold or redeemed at their full face value at any time.

The board points out in reply that the home owners' loan act was passed, not for the purpose of giving such holders cash for their mortgage loans, but as a constructive means of relieving both the lender and the borrower by providing a sound long-term loan under Federal supervision.

"The principal of the bonds is secured by amortized mortgages upon homes fairly and reasonably appraised, and is not due for payment for 18 years. The price of the bonds, therefore, subject to the law of market supply and demand in exactly the same manner as any other high-grade unmatured obligation.

Market Is Expected.

The bonds, if accepted and held by investors who fully understand their merits and who wish to enjoy income guaranteed by the United States Government, would presumably command a stable market price consistent with their quality and with prevailing money rates."

The announcement concludes by emphasizing that any investor who sells the bonds below their face value woud defeat his own interests, since he would find it difficult to invest the proceeds with equal safety in other securities paying an equivalent income return.

The statement illustrates this by the fact that if the bonds are sold at a price of 80, for example, the investor would find it necessary to place such funds in other tax-exempt securities paying 5 per cent or more in order to obtain as high an income as the 4 per cent yield guaranteed by the corporation bonds.

Selling Drive Pushes Curb To Low Levels

Closing Rallies Reduce Losses; Sales Drop to 182,000 Shares.

New York, Sept. 25 (A.P.).—The Curb Market fell back under a trickle of selling in the forenoon today but offered stouter resistance in the late dealing. Loses of fractions to around 2 points were reduced in the last hour, though there was a tendency to ease again at the close.

Prices were fairly steady at the start, utilities, including Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric, edged fractionally higher, but heaviness in alcohols and metal soon changed the outlook and all divisions fell back. Volume, however, was restricted, the day's approximate sales dwindling to 182,000 shares compared with 396,000 for last Friday.

Aluminum Co. of America lost more than 3 points, then regained a major fraction. Losses of around 2 points were suffered by New Jersey Zinc, Newmont Mining, Hiram Walker and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams. Shares yielding major fractions to around a point included Lake Shore Mines, Armstrong Cork, Electric Bond & Share, Atlas Corporation, Humble Oil and Pan American Airways.

Wheat Values Forced Higher In Buying Rush

Speculation and Mill Needs Combine to Improve Closing Prices.

Chicago, Sept. 25 (AP).—Brisk expansion of speculative buying rallied grain prices at the last today, more than overcoming nearly 3 cents a bushel break earlier in wheat.

Rallies were associated with reports that the United States Department of Agriculture was working on plans to extend the time for signing wheat acreage reduction contracts, and that other price-stimulating measures were under advisement at Washington.

Domestic mills, as well as speculators, were credited with late purchasing of wheat futures.

Wheat Closes Firm.

Wheat closed firm at the same as Saturday's finish to ⅛ higher; corn, ⅜ off to ¼ up; oats, unchanged to ⅝ lower, and provisions varying from 15 cents decline to a rise of 5 cents.

Until just prior to the wind-up, wheat values had a general downward trend, owing to apparent failure of fresh inspiring general business factors to develop over the week-end.

Especially during the first part of the day, numerous recent speculative buyers made a switch to the selling side, and price setbacks at times were swift, reflecting in the main individual operations rather than anything in the news.

Some notice, though, was taken of a tumble in a British exchange and 1,600,000 bushels increase of the amount of wheat on ocean passage, together with Russian insistence on a larger export quota than other countries appeared likely to allow.

Domestic Wheat Movement.

Attention veered subsequently to sharp curtailing of the domestic primary movement of wheat, and it was asserted that this was the first Monday since the 1933 crop started to move in volume that the total had fallen below 1,000,000 bushels.

Last year, the United States visible supply began decreasing at the beginning of October, and continued to decrease with few exceptions until the middle of July. In some quarters, decided encouragement was expressed at seeing wheat advance with currency inflation talk flattening out.

Corn and oats rallied with wheat. Further complaints were received about short yields of corn, notably in Illinois. Provisions averaged lower, responsive to hog market downturns.

Area Will Be Added To National Forest

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.).—Vast holdings of the Cherry River Boom and Lumber Co. in five central West Virginia counties are to be acquired for expansion of the Monongahela National Forest, recently authorized, and Arthur A. Wood, forest supervisor, declares that the purchase is expected to make necessary a complete reorganization of the administrative forces of the forest.

This proposed addition to the national forest amounts to 200,000 acres, which is two-thirds of its present holdings. The purchased area is in parts of Randolph, Webster, Pocohontas, Nicholas and Greenbrier Counties, and while it is drained largely by the Gauley River, it embraces parts of the watersheds of the Williams, Cranberry and Cherry Rivers.

An examining party of 16 experienced foresters is now engaged in making a preliminary examination of the tract. This work will require two weeks or more.

Factory To Be Auctioned Off.

Bedford, Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.).—The commodious factory building of the Bedford-Armstrong Corporation will be offered for sale at public auction, November 25. This building was erected here several years ago at a cost of more than $40,000, the majority of the stock having been subscribed by Bedford citizens.

250 West Virginia Workers Get Jobs

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.).—Approximately 250 industrial workers have been added at manufacturing plants of two central West Virginia cities since they went on revised operating schedules a few weeks since, the result of increased orders.

The Steele-Wallace Corporation at Richwood, largest manufacturer of clothes pins in the world, has added 100 workers. Owing to increased orders the plant is now operating 24 hours a day.

The four glass manufacturing plants at Weston have recently added 150 workers and are now employing approximately 1,100 in the aggregate. Seventy-five per cent of the pick-up, according to Louis Wohinc, president of the two companies and leader of the industry there, results from the return of beer, which has brought in surprising orders for steins, glasses, jugs and similar containers.

Oil Seen Leading Way to Recovery

Chicago, Sept. 25 (AP).—Edward G. Seubert, president of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana and chairman of the industry's code committee for the Central States, said today that oil had an opportunity to lead the way to recovery.

His committee will begin its duties as an enforcement agency of the code next week.

The code could end most of the destructive trade practices in the industry, Seubert declared. He expressed confidence that price advances, necessary as operations were adjusted to the code, would have the public's "cooperation and understanding."

Huge Purchase Of Steel Looms After Meeting

(Associated Press.)

Indication that an understanding had been reached on the purchase of a huge amount of steel rails was given late yesterday after President Roosevelt had conffered with the heads of three steel companies.

Myron Taylor, chairman of the board of United States Steel, said after the conference that there was a "plan that will probably work."

"We are out of orders," he said, "and we are prepared to bid on any business offered us."

"We are going to compete for that business," interposed Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel.

L. C. Black, chairman of the board of Inland Steel, was the other participant in the meeting attended by Joseph B. Eastman, Federal rail coordinator and Donald Richberg, counsel of the NRA.

It was indicated Mr. Roosevelt would make an early statement.

Later it was said at the White House that the President requested the steel leaders to bid on about 700,000 tons of steel rails.

It was added that Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that he expected the steel companies to make the lowest possible competitive bids in view of the very large size of the order.

Coal Workers' Wages Increased in Virginia

Dante, Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.).—A substantial increase in wages of all except salaried employes of the Clinchfield Coal Corporation here and at Clinchco, was announced recently by Lee Long, general manager of the company, effective September 18, bringing wages up to the level required by the coal code.

Increased Cotton Consumption Laid to More U. S. Distribution

Manchester, Eng., Sept. 25 (AP). An increase of 2,010,000 bales over last year in the world's cotton mill consumption — mainly due to greater consumption of American cotton—is revealed in statistics compiled by the International Federation of Master Cotton Spinners and Manufacturers Associations.

The statistics for the various kinds of cotton were: American, 14,167,000 bales, an increase of 1,848,000 over a year ago; East Indian, 4,200,000, a decrease of 588,000; Egyptian, 936,000, a decrease of 44,000; and sundries, 5,029,000, an increase of 749,000 bales.

Figures given for some of the other leading countries were: Germany, 633,000, against 579,000; India, 1,264,000, against 1,372,000; Japan, 1,512,000, against 1,388,000; China, 1,233,000, against 1,349,000; and the United States, 3,309,000, against 2,800,000.

In Britain during the half-year ending July 31, the total estimated number of spinning spindles was 49,001,000, as compared with 50,167,000 in the previous half-year.

In the United States they had decreased to 30,894,000 from 31,255,000, while in Japan they had increased to 8,209,000 from 7,965,000.

The rise of the industry in Japan is indicated by the comparative figures showing that in 1913 the spinning spindles in Britain numbered 55,576,108, and in Japan, 1,176,960.

Loadings of C.&O. Line Advance 1,089 Cars

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Chesapeake & Ohio Railway last week handled 32,136 cars of freight against 31,147 in the previous week and 28,288 a year ago.

China Cotton Offer Spurned by Japan

Tokyo, Sept. 23 (AP).—Japanese cotton mills in Shanghai, to which the Chinese offered to sell a portion of the cotton they got by an American loan, declined to purchase, for the present at least, because of the advice they received from Akira Ariyoshi, Japan's minister to China, it was learned at the foreign office today.

The minister told the Japanese spinners that the purchase in present circumstances probably would be against Japan's national interests.

It would be likely, he said, to arouse the resentment of the Japanese public because there was danger that the funds realized by China might be used in anti-Japanese agitation and the purchase of arms which probably eventually would be utilized against Japan or in civil war.

Visible Supply of Grain.

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes, in bushels: Wheat increased 323,000; corn increased 850,000; oats increased 1,131,000; rye increased 280,000; barley increased 116,000.

Canada Offers New Plan for Farm Owners

Montreal, Sept. 25 (AP).—An ambitious settlement scheme, which, if adopted, would transform huge tracts of land throughout Canada into small farms, occupied by immigrants from Great Britain, has been advanced by Brig. Gen. Hornby, of Alberta.

Gen. Hornby has placed his "British Settlement in Canada" scheme before the governments of Canada and Great Britain.

The scheme, briefly, calls for the British government to purchase large tracts of land in blocks of 5,000 and 10,000 acres, in the different provinces of Canada, principally in the west. These blocks will be divided into small farms of 50 and 100 acres, on which selected immigrants from various communities in Britain will be placed and trained in mixed farming, for five years. During that time, in addition to his training, each immigrant will also receive remuneration for his services from the sale of a portion of the product he raises on his allotted acreage. At the end of the five-year term those who have made good as farmers will be permitted to remain in Canada and to purchase land in any one of the provinces.

Brunswick, Ga., Seeks Free Atlantic Seaport

Brunswick, Ga., Sept. 25.—Brunswick may become an important Atlantic seaport if plans now in the making materialize. Proposals now being drafted would, if approved, make Brunswick a free port, placing it in the same classification with Oslo, Norway; Hamburg, Germany; and Rotterdam, Holland.

Application has been made to the Public Works Administration for a Federal canal project connecting the Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico across a lower strip of Georgia and the northern part of Florida.

Cotton Prices Sag in Spite of Trade Buying

December Sells at 10.13 as General Market Sinks 2 to 9 Points.

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—An early decline in cotton was followed by rallies on trade buying and covering, but after selling up from 10.02 to 10.24, or 5 points net higher for December, prices eased off again under renewed liquidation and Southern selling.

December closed at 10.13 with the general market ending steady at net declines of 2 to 9 points.

The opening was 5 to 13 points lower in response to disappointing Liverpool cables and an advance in sterling. There was some foreign selling as well as some from the South, together with October liquidation in preparation for possible notices tomorrow.

Offerings Are Absorbed.

Initial offerings were absorbed by trade buying of the near months and a scattering commission house demand for later deliveries, but the buyers were supplied by continued Southern selling and liquidation or reselling by recent buyers.

The demand for the trade continued, but increased hedging was encountered during the last hour, together with renewed liquidation, and closing prices were 9 to 12 points off from the best.

Exports today 15,980, making over 1,134,918 so far this season. Port receipts, 49,646. U. S. port stocks, 3,282,459.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easy today under scattered liquidation in December and March, promoted by the heaviness in lard and crude oil. Final prices were 11 to 20 points net lower with sales of 9 contracts. Bleachable spot closed 4.60, September 4.65, December 5.02, January 5.05, March 5.24.

West Virginia Asks For Federal Grants

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.). Application for Federal grants to finance or help finance the construction of public works projects has been made by three northern West Virginia cities.

The City of New Martinsville wants a grant for the construction of a public water works system, and the City of Benwood a public hospital. Their applications are being studied in detail by the Federal Public Works Advisory Board for West Virginia.

Application of Belington for a grant for a modern filtration plant has been forwarded to Washington by the State board with the statement that the community is badly in need of a decent water supply and that it is hopeful the Government will approve the application.

Hard Coal Operators Expected to File Code

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Dow, Jones & Co., said today that the anthracite operators would probably agree on a code for their industry and file it in time for hearings next week.

The code, it was said, is expected to call for the same wage scale now being paid under an agreement with the United Mine Workers of America, and is likely, said Dow, Jones, "to put an end to the ruinous price-cutting which has worked to the detriment of the industry over the last several years."

Brisk Orders Seen Prior to Steel Advance

Fourth Quarter Prices to Be Higher; Revision of Contracts Planned.

Cleveland, Sept. 25.—A $2 per ton advance in plates and shapes and $3 in bars becoming effective September 30, fourth-quarter contracting for these heavy finished steel products is expected to be brisk this week, states the magazine Steel.

Accompanying this rise is a revision of terms calculated to make a contract for heavy steel as ironclad as a contract for pig iron long has been. Beginning immediately, producers will contract on the following basis:

1. For a definite tonnage to be completely specified in time for shipment before the last day of the quarter.

2. For a tonnage from which the buyer may deviate up 25 per cent or the mill down 25 per cent.

3. For a stated percentage of a consumer's requirements within a specified maximum. It is possible that mills also will give protection on identified jobs for 60 days.

Spur to Coverage.

The fact that the present 1.60c, Pittsburgh, base on plates, shapes and bars becomes 1.75c and 1.80c Saturday is a spur to coverage. However, there are balancing penalties for under and overestimating requirements, the former necessitating open market purchases at advanced levels and the latter the payment for and stocking of surplus material.

General business still being confused and the fourth-quarter outlook obscure, buyers normally would tend toward conservatism, but if the prospect for inflation deepens this week an investment in materials may appear more attractive than the conservation of cash. In any event, demand has been so negligible for several weeks that whatever contracting develops will represent a marked gain.

An advance at this time is in the face of an ebbing market, which by the usual tests would not support a price rise, but producers point to sharp increases under the steel code as offering no alternative. Ingot costs alone have increased $2 per ton, with conversion costs bringing the total almost to $4, due chiefly to labor and fuel.

Youngstown Mills Up.

During the past week specifications against expiring contracts were so extensive the national steel rate sank only 1 point, to 40 per cent. Chicago mills gained 4 points to 44 per cent on the strength of rail releases. Youngstown mills were up 2 points, to 48 per cent and Buffalo 3, to 48. Eastern Pennsylvania was steady at 35½ per cent, Detroit at 55, and Birmingham at 50. Pittsburgh eased a point to 34, Wheeling 3, to 72; Cleveland 6, to 54, and New England 10, to 86. This week New England will drop 16 points and Pittsburgh 4 points; Youngstown will gain 2.

Public work is more a factor in the structural market, prospective jobs including 4,000 tons for Boulder Dam, 3,000 tons each for a bridge at Quincy, Mass., and for the Puget Sound Navy yard, 3,500 tons for a municipal auditorium at Kansas City, Mo., and 3,500 tons for Middle West bridges. Last week's awards were 12,645 tons.

Word from Washington concerning railroad purchases remains indefinite, but some support from this quarter appears certain. The New York Central's distribution of 8,230 tons of rails makes a total of 17,530 released this year. Thirty-five thousand tons is said to be in prospect from the Santa Fe.

Tin Plate Mills.

Whether tin plate mills can operate at capacity more than a month longer rests with canmakers, who may bridge the approaching seasonal letdown by manufacturing for stock at present prices. A few small lots of cast iron pipe are coming out of the public works program. Buying of hot-rolled strip has been a shade broader. Specifications for sheets, especially from automotive users, have necessitated putting on additional capacity.

Pig iron shipments continue seasonally high. For the New York vehicular tunnel 25,000 tons will be placed shortly. More Indian iron is being sold in New England. Scrap remains dull, with the easy tendency in prices dominant. Coal strikes are firming coke quotations.

Merchant rail bars have been put up $3 in conformity with hot-rolled bars, and cold-finished and alloy bars are likely to advance and retain their differentials. Hot-rolled sheets No. 10 gage are now quoted at the new price of 1.75 cents, Pittsburgh.

Steel's index of iron and steel is unchanged at $31.23. The finished steel composite, however, is up 20 cents, to $48.50, while the scrap index is off 17 cents, to $10.71.

Orphans to Be Guests of Post at Circus—Juggled Bookings—National Reviewed

Hunt's Circus Shows a Week, Starting 30th

Will Play in All Sections; Nance O'Neill, Freddie Sherman Score.

The juvenile inmates of all the orphanages and eleemosynary institutions in the National Capital have a treat in store for them.

Just as it did last year, The Washington Post again will entertain the District of Columbia's orphans at matinee performances of Hunt's Circus, following practically the same schedule as last season.

Hunt's Three-Ring Circus, the only circus in the world owned and operated by a great-grandmother, yet emphasizing the spirit of youth in its performances, will appear at the following locations in Washington, beginning next Saturday.

Saturday, September 30, Wisconsin avenue and S street northwest; Monday, October 2, Wisconsin and Nebraska avenues northwest; Tuesday, October 3, Georgia avenue and Underwood street northwest; Wednesday, October 4, Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast; Thursday, October 5, Eighteenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast; Friday, October 6, Nichols avenue and Portland street southeast.

Unique Among Circuses.

Hunt's Three-Ring Circus is unique in more respects than one. It clings unremittingly to all of the time-honored traditions of the big tops and tanbark. It even continues in honorable service the oldest, and the last, of the singing clowns—at the ripe old age of 77!

There are four generations of the Hunt family actively engaged in the conduct of the show. The real executive head of the enterprise is the widow of the former owner of the circus. She is the great-grandmother of the youngest of the Hunts traveling with the outfit.

The performance at which all of the District orphans will be guests of The Post, on days and dates to be made known in due course, is opened with the spectacle "Happy Days," billed as "a timely pageant of better times." And to show how modern is the spirit of the circus owned by Grandmother Hunt, the concluding spectacle is "The Spirit of the NRA."

Owing to the cordial and friendly relations prevailing between the circus and the residential neighborhoods in which it plays, and the interest the Capital always displays in this particular show, its band and clown and specialty artists personnels are being augmented for the local week.

The inaugural performance of "S. O. S. Iceberg," with which the Rialto Theater will reopen after a summer of idleness with one reserved seat presentation on Friday night of this week at 8:30, is being sponsored by the Danish Legation. "S. O. S. Iceberg" is a feature unique among current releases in that it was produced in its entirety in the Arctic over a period of more than a year of actual filming. The Danish government did much to facilitate the work of the company sent into the frozen north by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures, maker of the film and lessee of the Rialto.

Scrambled Bookings.

As is usual at this time of the year—especially with the state of the theater what it is, has been for several years and, it is to be hoped, shall not be forevermore—the legitimate theater bookings are being juggled with almost the speed that Stan Kavanaugh manipulates his tennis balls at the Earle.

Out of the early bookings announced for the National Theater, the only two that remain definitely set, as this is written Monday evening, are Lenore Ulric in "Her Man of Wax," for next week, and Helen Hayes in "Mary of Scotland," the week of October 23.

Pola Negri in "A Trip to Pressburg" is out for the week of October 9, the new Shubert production not yet being whipped into shape, if it actually has gone into rehearsal.

For example, the week of October 9 at the National may be filled by the Theater Guild's production of "A School for Husbands," with a distinguished cast in the many roles of importance, and it is not impossible that either Roland Young and Laura Hope Crews, in "Only With You," or Pauline Lord, in Sidney Howard's "The Late Christopher Bean," may be brought in to fill the week of October 16.

Then, again, it may have to be a picture for either week, or both.

Speaking of pictures, after having been tentatively penciled in for either the week of October 15 or October 22, or both, at the National, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the Edna Ferber-George S. Kaufman stage hit, "Dinner at Eight," with 14 stars in the pivotal roles, now is finally booked to begin an indefinite engagement that may continue for as long as three weeks at the National, beginning Sunday, October 29.

McClintic Will Wait.

Putting the uncertainty with regard to Guthrie McClintic's production of "Jezebel" to rest with some finality, Ray Henderson, the erudite stentor who devotes his talents to the glorification of the Katharine Cornell-Guthrie McClintic enterprises, sends word that "Jezebel" is being held in abeyance only until such time as Tallulah Bankhead's health shall have been fully restored.

Miss Bankhead was engaged for the stellar role in the new Owen Davis play of the South and had got well along with rehearsals when she was stricken ill and all work on the play necessarily was forced to come to a standstill. Miss Bankhead, rather than impede Mr. McClintic's plans, voluntarily withdrew from the cast and suggested the engagement of another actress to take her place.

It was about this time that Miss Anne Grosvenor Ayres wrote this column of the serious nature of Miss Bankhead's illness. A later note from the same source has since conveyed the news that Miss Bankhead is well along the way toward recovery.

Mr. McClintic, also aware of Miss Bankhead's convalescence, has wisely decided to await the day when she can resume her place in the cast before proceeding further with what he plans to be one of his most important productions of the year.

Ian Keith, last seen here in Bourdet's "Best Seller" late last spring—a comedy, by the way, in which Peggy Wood, Ernest Truex and George Coulouris also appeared to advantage, although it was no great shakes of a play—on last Sunday evening, September 24, appeared for one performance only as Iago in George K. Arthur's production of Shakespeare's "Othello" in the Hollywood Playhouse on the Coast. Irving Pichel, erstwhile screen actor and director, appeared in the title role. This only bears out our earlier assertion that Keith is at heart a Shakespearean actor who would rather be seen in an Elizabethan production in the little theater in the Folger Shakespeare Memorial Library here in Washington than in any "run" production ever presented on Broadway. The text of the "Othello" production was adapted by Mr. Keith for this single performance.

Champion Commuter.

Erle Wright, who wears out more commuter's tickets between New York and Washington than any other man in show business, is back in town hot on the heels of his "Masquerader" exploitation for United Artists, to perform similar services for the same company in behalf of the Krimsky-Cochran picturization of Eugene O'Neill's "The Emperor Jones," coming to RKO-Keith's on Friday, with Paul Robeson in the role of Brutus Jones.

To convince the local critics that "The Emperor Jones" is as great a picture as the New York press and public have proclaimed it, Mr. Wright and Manager Meakin of RKO-Keith's are screening it this morning at 11 for the benefit of the dramatic desks.

Laughton in Hit.

If sufficiently pressed, and strictly as an aside, Mr. Wright also will tell you that his company's "The Private Life of Henry VIII," with Charles Laughton, the Nero of "The Sign of the Cross," in the role of merry King Hal, is the one to watch for. It is confided that after one look at this subject the U. A. executives speedily withdrew it from ordinary circulation and put it on the preferred "A" list, consisting of a small number of select films that can only be booked on a 50-50 percentage basis.

Miss Ulric, Hostess.

On Thursday night of next week, Lenore Ulric, opening the regular season of road attractions at the National in "Her Man of Wax," will be hostess to the full membership of the New York Giants and Washington Nationals, locked in a death struggle for the championship in the world series.

The New York Giants, of the National League, are being personally invited by Miss Ulric in New York and the Nationals of the American yesterday were extended invitations on her behalf by Manager Stephen E. Cochran, of the National Theater.

It is understood that both teams have signified their intention of accepting the invitation as a means of partially relaxing the strain of the series.

Now just think back a few weeks and remember what we told you about beginning to sift the ashes in those white flannel pants!

You ought to know by now that in this town winter comes in February—and is spring when it gets here!

"Criminal at Large," Stephen E. Cochran presents a play in three acts and five scenes by Edgar Wallace. Staged by Clifford Brooke; settings by Charles Squires.

Many years ago in "Kick In," one of his first plays, Willard Mack contributed to the American theater's library of melodrama a work in which all of the suspense, all of the tenseness of scene and all of the element of mystery was created by suggestion.

None of the acts of violence, to which frequent references were made, and none of the murdered bodies ever was revealed to the audience, although it was held in breathless attention by the implications of cleverly written dialogue and on the qui vive for something that momentarily might happen—but never did until the last few moments of the last act.

The late Edgar Wallace, one of the most prolific and most deft writers of mystery stories of his day, followed the identical formula in compounding his "Criminal at Large," disclosed to a Washington audience for the first time on any local stage in the National Theater last night, with Nance O'Neill the guest star and Freddie Sherman "stealing the show."

"Criminal at Large," known to British audiences as "The Case of the Frightened Lady," benefited, of course, by its newness to Washington theatergoers, but it profited no less by the smooth performance accorded it by players some of whom were new to patrons of the preliminary guest-star season but most of whom were well and favorably known for earlier work of a substantial and agreeable nature.

The plot conceived by Wallace is one of his typically baffling Scotland Yard police puzzles, in which too many seemingly innocent people are being found murdered about the premises of an old and honorable family tracing its lineage back through ten centures of heroic blood. One is soon made the confidant of the police and led through their eerie investigations which evolve, finally, into a most surprising betrayal of guilt in a quarter where it is least expected.

It is the sort of creepy narrative, with its unfathomable family secrets, cryptic and ominous retainers, secret panels and fatal scarfs, that may not be detailed without serious injustice to future audiences.

The play, naturally, was paced a little slowly last evening, but, in the main, fulfilled the author's purpose of a sustained and closely-knit recital of interesting and thrilling events.

Two outstanding performances marked the progress of the three acts and five scenes. Nance O'Neill, distinguished star of both the classic and modern stage, gave a poised, forceful and curiously provocative impersonation of the mother, whose fear of political interference in her affairs was based upon a cleverly obscured premise, and Freddie Sherman, as her neurotic and shrewdly deceptive son, offered a character study that far outdistanced anything he has ever previously shown in many seasons on E street.

Mr. Sherman, by virtue of his last act, rolled "Criminal at Large" up into a neat little bundle of personal triumph and walked off with it under his arm, undisputed and undenied. He was by every right entitled to share all of the many curtain calls following the last act with Miss O'Neill—which he graciously declined to do.

John Litel ranks next in the effectiveness of his portrayal of Chief Inspector Tanner of Scotland Yard, and competent support is lent the principals by Robert Ober, Karl Nielsen, Clifford Brooke, who carries the comedy burden as Sergt. Ferraby; Burke Clarke, Maurice Jarvis, Dennis Connell, and Helen Dodge.

Charles Squires settings, as usual, elicited a round of applause, and in every other respect "Criminal at Large" is well calculated to end the auxiliary season at the National in a considerable blaze of glory.

City Protected By Volunteer Police Force

Muddled Tax Situation Puts West Virginia Town in Dilemma.

Morgantown, W. Va., Sept. 25 (AP). This city of 16,000 is under volunteer police protection tonight.

A muddled tax situation has tied up funds and made it impossible for officials to meet pay rolls.

City Manager W. Edwin Brooks said "the volunteer protection now being given is normal, except that day 'beats' are not being walked."

The regular police force is composed of 10.

Brooks said the day police staff is subject to emergency calls. Traffic was being directed in school zones.

The city council ordered some functions suspended after the Supreme Court ruled all municipalities must pay their debts before they may expend funds for current needs.

The council will meet tomorrow night. Members do not know if they can take any action.

Other cities and towns whose funds also are tied up by the court ruling are hopeful a meeting of the West Virginia Municipalities League tomorrow may solve the difficulty.

Gov. Kump has ordered a rehearing be sought. He said that if the court's ruling remained unchanged, a special session of the Legislature "may be necessary."

Champ Clark, 9, New Arrival, Is Steeped in Baseball Lore

Son of Missouri Senator Sees Winning Griffs Goal to Aim at.

Though his father is a United States senator from Missouri and his grandfather was once Speaker of the National House of Representatives and candidate for the Presidency, Champ Clark 2d, thinks when it comes to a real job, being a member of the winning Nationals baseball team, is the ultimate of human achievement.

Young Champ, 9 years old, is a walking encyclopedia of baseball lore. The names, the positions and the batting average of practically every member of the Big League teams are mere pastime to him. He can converse learnedly on the respective merits of similar players in the St. Louis Cardinals, the Philadelphia Athletics, the Nationals and the Giants et al all over the country.

Sunday, Champ saw the Nationals in action for the first time. Naturally he was a wee bit disappointed that they did not win but he acknowledged that a team with a pennant could afford to lose a game now and then.

Champ's twin brothers, aged 5, Marsh and Kimball can not understand his excitement over baseball. To their minds, chasing butterflies, catching grasshoppers and watching dogs at play are much more exciting occupations. Like Lindbergh they think in terms of "We" and where one leads the other always follows.

They hold the record, however, of being the only pair of little boys who ever sat in window boxes amid the flowers out of third-story windows and escaped alive.

They are very modest about this, and assert it was only an exploit of their ballyhoo, being some two and one-half years old at the time.

Their taste for window-box feats seems to have vanished with the years, but they can think up plenty of new stunts of the same daring nature.

It has been said that the furniture in their bedroom has to be lashed down in order for it to survive the wild Indian games that take place when their nurse is occupied elsewhere.

Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, father and mother of this interesting trio, arrived in town on Friday with the youngsters and will soon occupy their new home in Spring Valley. They motored from St. Louis and the trio enjoyed the trip hugely, their parents perhaps less so.

Relief Denied

West Virginia Boards Shut Down to Drunkards.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.).—Drunkenness among the recipients of Federal relief funds is being penalized by county relief and welfare boards of West Virginia. Those who get drunk are to be dropped from the rolls and further relief denied.

An order to this effect has been posted at the city hall Parkersburg signed by John C. Yeager, director of the Wood County Welfare Board and approved by Mayor Allen C. Murdoch.

Like action is being taken in other county seats and results from complaints filed with the relief boards that men had been "getting drunk and carousing around" with Federal aid moneys given to them.

Storm Relief Plan Provided For Virginians

Nonprofit Corporation to Distribute Loans From U. S.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—The Federal and State Public Works Administration today set up a plan for relief for distressed owners of storm-wrecked property along the Virginia Coast.

The machinery was explained in a letter transmitted to Gov. Pollard for the consideration of the emergency storm committee, headed by S. Heth Tyler, of Norfolk.

Under the plan nonprofit making corporations would be set up through which Federal money would flow in loans to the owners of property wrecked by the hurricanes of August 23 and September 16. It would be for use in repairing and rebuilding homes and other structures, but would not for building new homes or for construction of seawalls or boats.

The corporations would receive Federal grants at 4 per cent interest, and lend it for 4½ per cent, the additional to be used in the cost of overhead. The money might be borrowed in amounts up to two-thirds of "fair appraised value" of the reconditioned property. It would be paid back in 10 years.

Austin Brokenbrough, Richmond, was appointed engineer-appraiser.

The money is to be spent under the usual public works regulations as to labor, wages and material.

Byrd Holds Road Campaign Council

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.). Senator Harry F. Byrd, as Virginia chairman in a campaign to build a scenic highway from the Shenandoah National Park, has asked representatives of North Carolina and Tennessee to meet with him in Washington tomorrow to plan the campaign.

State Police Powers Issue In Virginia

Dispute Rises at First Session of Convention of Executives.

Danville, Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.). The Virginia Police Executives Association opened its eighth annual meeting here today. Tomorrow the annual meeting of State building officials will be held. Both prelude the annual session of the Virginia League of Municipalities which will be in session two days.

Police officials were divided as to whether State police should come into the city limits to enforce the law, and after some discussion, the negative side being led by Chief of Police Robert B. Jordan, of Richmond, is was decided to appoint a committee to confer with T. McCall Frazier, State director of motor traffic.

Police problems and repeal will be the major themes tomorrow. Tonight the annual banquet was held. It was attended by 75 Virginia police officials.

The league session will be featured by discussions of the Federal public works program, through which $37,000,000 is available to Virginia in the recovery movement. Municipal taxation, relief, roads and problems of the depression also will be discussed.

Nats Try Out Trick National League Ball; Find it Part Rabbit

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

THEY are now calling the Giants the "Team of Destiny" up in New York and pooh-poohing the 7-to-5 odds that make the Nats the favorite to win the world series, which will be played on grass and not on paper, where the Washington Club is conceded to have the edge in all comparisons of the two clubs.

The hunch players are picking the Giants, the team that could do no wrong during the regular National League season, and argue that in a short series things can happen without regard to figures arrived at over a full season of play, and thus they are discounting the apparently superior strength of the Nats.

But this department will trade its hunches for figures any day. Give me the solid base hit in preference to the chance that an outfielder will drop an easy fly. Give me the stolen base in preference to the hope that the catcher will throw the ball away. The fact that the Nats lead the league in batting and fielding is no myth. There must be a reason. The reason is that they are usually winning ball games.

Sewell, Stewart Just Looking.

"Naw, we're not scouting the Giants," Joe Cronin said last week when interviewed on the subject.

Oh, no. Then, perhaps, Cronin will be surprised to learn that two of his ball players took French leave from Washington on Sunday and stole off to New York, where the Giants were playing the Braves in a double-header at the Polo Grounds.

They were there, Luke Sewell and Walter Stewart, to see what they could see concerning the Giants. An enterprisng New York photographer spotted them in the stands. Sewell fled the scene, but Stewart meekly submitted to a photograph.

Apprised of their presence, Giant coaches invited Sewell and Stewart to take a seat on the New York bench, an offer that was jocularly declined.

The presence of Sewell in New York to learn what he could learn about the Gi'nts shapes up like a strictly orthodox move of one manager to send his regular catcher into the enemy camp to take inventory of the kind of pitches the Gi'nt hitters like and don't like.

Cronin May Have Ideas.

But the mission of Stewart may be more significant. Why Stewart, rather than Whitehill, Crowder or Weaver, who are also scheduled to start in the series? Is it that Joe Cronin is planning some deep strategical maneuver that involves the southpaw who was poison to the Yankees all season?

If there is any deep strategy to be pulled in the series, Cronin will be the author of it. The Nats' manager is a born gambler and if he feels that Stewart is his pitcher mostly likely to stop the Gi'nts, then Stewart may be seen starting three games during the series, if necessary. It's just a thought, but I wouldn't put it beyond Cronin.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

Joe Cronin, the kid manager, was the boy orator last night at the testimonial banquet to the Nats . . . he stepped far out of his accustomed role to carry the house with his few thousand well-chosen words . . . and introduce Dave Harris as "the man who can hit in the dark." . . . Cronin and Heinie Manush were inspecting the new temporary bleachers at Griffith Stadium yesterday with an eye to some cheap home runs . . . and Bill McAfee came back to pitch to his old mates and earn his half share of the world series . . . when a runner is on first base, Washington pitchers are instructed to throw outside pitches to the batters . . . erection of the press boxes on the roof gives the Washington Club $6,500 worth of grand stand tickets that ordinarily would have been forfeited . . . had the same press arrangements of the 1924 and 1925 series obtained . . . Clark Griffith, ill yesterday, attended the testimonial banquet last night with his physician at his side.

Heuss Elected Captain Of Northwestern Team

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 25 (U.P.).—John Heuss, 6-foot-2-inch-tall tackle, was elected captain of the 1933 Northwestern University football team.

Heuss is a senior and weighs 180 pounds. His home is in Lansing, Mich. He played last year as a regular. He is 20 years old.

Hitless Wonder Signed By Baltimore for 1934

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 25 (Spl.).—The Baltimore Orioles have signed Jerome "Tommy" Thompson, of Clarksburg, regarded as one of the best pitchers in the Middle Atlantic League.

Thompson was pitching for Johnstown when the Middle Atlantic season closed and was sent to Baltimore for try-out. He pitched 12 innings as relief man without allowing a hit.

Cronin's Mother Kept From Series

San Francisco, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Mrs. M. J. Cronin, the mother who prayed for the Washington Nationals to win the American League pennant, will be unable to watch her 26-year-old son, Joe, pilot the Nationals in the world series.

"I'd give anything if I could make the trip, but a sudden attack of neuritis has made it impossible for me to travel," she said. "My husband will stay with me, but Joe's brother, Jimmy, is on his way there now."

Mrs. Cronin, on the day the Nationals won the pennant, told the United Press she had been praying for a victory.

"I just cried when I heard it," she said. "Joe has been such a good son."

Role as Hero Bids Series Players

Some "Unknown" May Be Star With Streak of Brilliance.

More often than not, the might and brilliant of those who can star over a season of play carries on through the post-seasno duels. There was Babe Ruth in his great splurges against the Pirates in 1927, the Cards in 1928, when he established a series clouting mark of .625, and last fall in the Yankee mauling of the Cubs. Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons, Bob Grove and George Earnshaw, the four horsemen of the Athletics, rose as high in series competition as they had done through the season's play.

Not Often an Outsider.

But now and then there comes a Tommy Thevenow, and Pepper Martin, one a member of the 1926 Cardinals, the other the Redbird hero of 1931, to dazzle the folks with an extremely unexpected streak of brilliance. They're the inspirational type of ball player, soaring highest in the thrilling tenseness, the "clutch" of world series crowds and battle.

Because the mighty have held sway since Martin tore his way through the A's in 1931, the law of averages in conjunction with the baseball fates should toss the hero's mantle next about the shoulders of a buck private in the series' rear ranks. Probably no two teams ever entered the interleague play with more possible candidates than the Giants and the Nats.

Ryan a Fighter.

There's John ("They Can't Stop Us") Ryan, the Giants' blonde shortstop, packed full of the old college try of the Holy Cross variety. A .250 hitter in the International League last season, he's down to .235 now, but his marvelous fielding has held the Giants together. No other National League shortstop, with the exception of Floyd Vaughan, of the Pirates, has driven in more runs. He revels in hard going.

Then there's Buddy Myer, the Nats' second baseman, the fellow Bill Terry shakes his head over. Myer is hitting .312, and while he can't challenge Hughie Critz, Giant second-sacker, as a fielder and double-play pivot, he's the one man on the Washington club who failed to show the Giant scouts a weakness.

Possibilities for the unexpected

Tilden Defeats Cochet, 3-0, In Paris

Big Bill and Bruce Barnes Corral Doubles in Tilt With France.

PARIS, Sept. 25 (AP).—William T. Tilden II, patriarch of American tennis, today accomplished in brilliant fashion as a professional what he had failed to do as an amateur Davis Cup player from 1927 to 1930—defeat Henri Cochet—to give the United States victory in a professional series with France.

Playing in a form reminiscent of the Tilden who ruled the tennis world from 1920 to 1927, and with the added guile of experience, Big Bill required just 55 minutes and three sets to crush his nemesis of amateur days. The scores were 6—3, 6—4, 6—2.

Contest Dramatic.

The Cochet of the match was hardly the great little Frenchman of 1930 and before, while Tilden appeared to the enthusiastic gallery to be as good as ever. They gave the American an ovation at the end of the match.

The contest was filled with a heavy cross-court fire, drop shots and deep drives, neither getting to the net for many smashes. It was a beautiful exhibition of tennis strategy, with the keen antagonism of the players lifting it to dramatic heights not indicated by the score.

As an anticlimax to the duel, Tilden and his partner, Bruce Barnes, the former University of Texas star, defeated Cochet and Martin Plaa in doubles to make the final series count four to one for the United States.

Two Sets Split.

The match had been halted yesterday by rain, with Tilden and Barnes leading, 4—1, in games, after splitting the first two sets. They quickly ran it out from there, 6—2, 4—6, 6—1, 6—4.

In the first match of the day Barnes defeated Plaa, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—1.

The first two singles matches last Friday were defeated, Tilden beating Plaa and Cochet winning from Barnes. Rain made play impossible Saturday, and today's matches were played on a slippery court.

Grimm Re-Signed As Cubs Manager

Veteran First Baseman Won Pennant in '32.

Chicago, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—The Chicago Cubs management announced tonight that Charley Grimm has been signed to have charge of the team again in 1934.

Grimm, veteran first baseman, took over control of the Cubs late in the 1932 season. The team, under Rogers Hornsby, then was in the doldrums, but, under Grimm, fought its way to the pennant.

There had been many rumors that, because of the team's failure to repeat, Grimm would be replaced.

Use 'Anybody,' Giants Told By Griffs

"WE don't want to take any advantage of the Giants, or give them any excuse for an alibi," said Clark Griffith, president of the Nats, last night, explaining his giving the National League champs permission to use Infielder Charles Dressen in the coming title set.

According to baseball rules, a player must be a member of a contending team by August 31 to be eligible to play in baseball's October classic. Dressen, recalled from Nashville, reported to the Giants September 9.

Due to the fact that Johnny Vergez, regular third-sacker, is recovering from an appedicitis operation and will not be available and the veteran Travis Jackson, who has been filling in at third, is having trouble with an old knee injury, the Giants found themselves in quite a predicament.

They asked permission to make an exception in Dressen's case and President Griffith wired his consent to Commissioner Landis, who passed it on to the National League champs.

"We don't care who the Giants use," Griffith said last night. "The Giants claimed they had let us use Hack Miller under the same conditions in 1924. That's not so. Miller joined us in July. Anyhow, I told them they could use anybody they pleased."

Since reporting to the Giants, Dressen has fielded flashily, making but one error in 31 chances. He has hit at only a .273 clip, but has contributed a number of timely blows. With Nashville, the 35-year-old veteran batted .330 in 127 games.

City Notables Join in Fete For Nats

Fred Buchholz Plays Host; Farley, Pat Harrison, Cronin, Griff Speak.

HONORS were heaped on the pennant-winning Nats last night at a testimonial banquet tendered by Fred Buchholz at the Occidental Hotel and attended by 150 guests, representative of Washington's official and civic life.

From Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington team, the assemblage heard again the story of the appointment of youthful Joe Cronin as manager of the Nats, how the "Old Fox" recognized the fighting spirit of the ball player, and so took him from the ranks to lead his team to championship.

Cronin Modest.

From Cronin himself, the guests heard unstinted praise for his players as he waived all credit for himself. Joe expressed confidence in the Nats' ability to continue their success through the world series.

Introduced with the sparkling wit of Toastmaster Roe Fulkerson were the speakers of the evening: Senator Pat Harrison, Postmaster General James Farley, Representative John J. Cochran and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury W. L. Roberts.

Farley to "Compromise."

Postmaster General Farley, a native New Yorker, compromised by announcing he would support the Giants in the games at New York and the Nats in the games at Washington.

Criticism Costs Champ Title in South Africa

Johannesburg, South Africa, Sept. 25 (AP).—The Transvaal Board of Boxing Control today declared vacant the South African heavyweight title held by Dan McCorkindale because of his failure to repudiate a statement attributed to him criticizing the refereeing in his bout with W. L. (Young) Stribling.

Mr. Keech, Peoples Counsel of the Public Utilities Commission, will receive money for the cup and medals. Civic and business groups will be asked for donations.

Series Ducats Ready Here Thursday

FANS notified by the Washington Baseball Club that world series tickets ordered by them have been reserved, may get them Thursday, Secretary Edward B. Eynon, jr. announced last night.

More than 35,000 strips of three-game tickets have been printed, including box seats at $8.60 per game; grandstand seats, at $5.50 per game, and pavilion seats, at $3.30 per game. Single game tickets for standing room, at $3.30, and bleacher tickets for temporary stands near the center field scoreboard, at $1.10, also will be available.

Temporary bleacher tickets will be placed on sale the day of the game, and will be distributed on a "first come, first served" basis. ## Cards Beat Pirates, 6-3; Near 3d Place

St. Louis, Sept. 25 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals increased their chances of landing in third place in the National League by a 6-to-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates here today. The Red Birds need only two more victories for third place.

The Cardinals pounded three pitchers, Hal Smith, Larry French and Bill Swift, for 14 hits, and Rookie Gene Moore aided with a triple. Bill Walker allowed the Pirates ten hits.

Griffmen Vote Series Cuts For 32

24 Men to Get Full Shares, Other "Slices" Range Down to $200.

MANAGER JOE CRONIN and his merry men took time off from work yesterday for the pleasant recreation of deciding how they will divide up the world series pot. Gathering in their locker room following a lengthy batting drill, the Nats had little argument in deciding among themselves just who would figure in the melon-cutting and to what extent.

It was quite a different type of meeting from those held in 1924 and 1925, when several of the boys put their heads together and tried to cut down such dependables as Trainer Mike Martin and Coaches Nick Altrock and Al Schacht, as there was no argument of any kind.

32 Get Full Shares.

Thirty-two, including players, secretaries and others who have done their bit toward the Nats' cause, will share in the pot. Twenty-four full shares were voted, as follows: Moe Berg, Ossie Bleuge, Bob Boken, Cliff Bolton, Bob Burke, Joe Cronin, Al Crowder, Goose Goslin, Dave Harris, Johnny Kerr, Joe Kuhel, Heinie Manush, Buddy Myer, Sam Rice, Jack Russell, Fred Schulte, Luke Sewell, Walter Stewart, Al Thomas, Monte Weaver, Earl Whitehill, Nick Altrock, Al Schacht and Mike Martin.

Secretary Edward B. Eynon, jr., Clubhouse Boy Frank Baxter, and Bill McAfee, recently sent to Rochester, were voted half-shares.

Pitcher Ed Chapman gets a flat $750, as does Groundkeeper Emil Haisman, while Pitcher Alec McColl and Third Baseman Cecil Travis will draw down $500 each. Assistant Secretary Billy Smith was voted $200, with the players deciding to make up a pot for Bat Boy James Mahorney and Batting-Practice Catcher Fitzgerald.

Giants Generous.

Twenty-one will receive full shares. Playing Manager Bill Terry, Critz, James, Ryan, Jackson, Vergez, Moore, Davis, Ott, O'Doul, Peel, Richards, Mancuso, Clark, Hubbell, Fitzsimmons, Schumacher, Parmelee, Luque, Bell and Spencer; Coaches Clark, Snyder and Smith, Trainer Willie Schaefer, and Secretary Jim Tierney.

Half shares were voted to Players Danning and Salveson. Quarter shares were voted to Players Dressen and Shores.

The Giants also voted $1,000 to Henry Fabian, grounds-keeper; $800 to Fred Logan, clubhouse man; $200 to Logan's son, Ed; and $500 to Joe Troy, batboy.

If the Giants win the series a full share will be worth approximately $5,000. If they lose it will be worth nearly $3,200.

Cronin Slaps 3 to Distant Corners

Harris, Schulte, Kuhel, Rice and Goslin Also Hit It Far Away.

Edge Given Giant Hurlers Also Applies to Our Boys, Says Joe.

THE much-maligned National League baseball, which Manager Bill Terry, of the Giants, says will infect the Washington batting attack with pernicious anemia, was given a trial by the Nats at Griffith Stadium yesterday and something is amiss.

A shipment of the more thickly covered National League spheres, with raised stitches supposed to give the pitchers a pronounced edge, was ordered from the factory by Manager Joe Cronin, and he and his conferees gave the ball the works in a two-hour hitting session.

Canny Mr. Cronin, who is overlooking no bets in preparation for the series opener next Tuesday at the Polo Grounds, dumped three dozen of the National League balls on the mound and told his pitchers to pitch 'em.

Slam! And Away She Goes!

"Gee, I must be in the wrong league," said Cronin.

"That ball's not going to make a lot of difference," said Cronin. "If that thicker cover and the raised stitches help the Giant pitchers, it's going to help our pitchers, too. If they can get a better grip on the ball, Crowder and Whitehill will wrap some pitches around their necks; don't make any mistake about that."

Preparedness Watchword.

Cronin has put the National League ball in the hands of all his hurlers to use during their warm-ups for the two games in New York when the same type of ball the Giants have been using will be the official ball. For the games in Washington, the official American League ball will be used.

The Nats were getting the range all day yesterday on those temporary seats, jutting out from the left and center field fences. All balls in those sectors will go for home runs and will be targets, especially for the Nats' right-handed hitters, Cronin, Schulte, Bluege and Sewell.

Cronin was amused at the dire predictions of Manager Bill Terry that his Giants would beat both Whitehill and Crowder in the first two games of the series.

"It will sure surprise me if they do," said Joe, who would venture no further statement except that all his pitchers would be ready.

"I don't know yet who is going to work that first game for us," said Cronin. "We had a meeting yesterday and I told 'em all to be ready. They'll BE ready, too."

Dodgers Down Phils, 7-2, for 5th Straight

Philadelphia, Sept. 25 (AP).—Behind the effective pitching of Walter Beck, the Brooklyn Dodgers today won their fifth straight game, defeating the Phillies, 7 to 2, in the third game of their final series, which started at Ebbets Field yesterday.

The Dodgers hammered Snipe Hansen and Cy Moore for 16 hits, with Glenn Wright, Hack Wilson and Linus Frey leading the attack. Wright and Wilson connected with two singles and a double each, while Frey, Nashville recruit shortstop, cracked out three singles.

While the Dodgers were getting at least one hit each inning, Beck held the Phils to seven scattered hits for his twelfth victory of the season. Three of the blows were doubles.

Pova Qualifies for Eastern Shore Handicap by Easy Victory at Havre de Grace

Filly Scores Third Win In Row

3 Winners for Meade, 2 for Tipton Ties Duo for Jockey Lead.

By Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, Sept. 25.—It took a stable boy on a lead pony and Jockey Don Meade to get T. H. Somerville's Pova to the post in the Federal Hill, the lay's feature race. However, the filly needed no assistance when the racing began. She hopped through the stall gate at the sound of the bell and, aside from a little guiding by Meade, did very well in the matter of getting home in front at the judges' stand.

In fact, she did such a good job of it that the six others in the field were having their own battle getting in the money.

The chartmakers called the finish two lengths and a half for Pova. Can't Remember and Fortification were second and third.

Third Victory in Row.

Pova was no secret. She had run in two races before and each time had made a show of her opposition. Her first outing was in a $1,500 claiming race, but those with that much cash will not be offered such a bargain in the near future.

The crowd of some 8,000 sent the money pouring into the windows with the result that a $4 mutuel was hung up. The filly stepped the six furlongs in 1:11 4-5, the second fastest time of the meeting and qualified for the Eastern Shore Handicap.

Meade rode two other winners to tie Tipton, who had a pair of victories, for riding honors at the meeting. They now have 13 each.

Meade was off to a flying start, piloting home Prenfentious, of the George D. Widener string, in the first race. Thirteen juveniles composed the field and Meade kept the ultimate winner off the pace set by Some Good and No Doubt to come to the outside in the stretch and win going away. Gnomnie took the place from Some Good.

The public made the mutuel plant dig up extra tickets on Cutie Face in the second race and each one was cashed. The filly shook off Bally Bay to score an easy victory in the 6-furlong dash. Longford was second ahead of Bally Bay. Tipton had the mount on the winner which paid only $3.

War Plane, fairly consistent at Rockingham, scored in a driving finish to take the fourth race, a claiming affair, over the mile and 70 yards route. Ned O. was beaten a head with Kate third. Lowry outrode Sage to gain the decision. War Plane was overlooked in the heavy betting and paid a $15.80 mutuel.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The question of drinking has found expression even on tombstones—with the pros and cons adequately expressed by the mourners. The epitaph illustrated above speaks a word for the milder drinks, but opposed to this is a self-composed epitaph found on the grave of an Englishman at Thetford. It reads, in part:

According to my thinking,
Is owing to my good living

If therefore, good Christians,
You wish to live long,
Don't drink too much wine, brandy, gin,
Or anything strong.

A short, pointed argument—whether meant to be or not—is found on a stone near Stowe, Vt. It simply states:

A rum cough

Poor Dicky Towley, give him a drink.
Because Dicky Towley was always dry.

If therefore, good Christians,
You wish to live long,
Don't drink too much wine, brandy, gin,
Or anything strong.

A short, pointed argument—whether meant to be or not—is found on a stone near Stowe, Vt. It simply states:

A rum cough

The epitaph writer who composed a few last lines for the grave of Dick Towley, in Yorkshire, England, injected some humor into his characterization of the late Mr. Towley:

Who lies here, who do you think,
Poor Dicky Towley, give him a drink.
Because Dicky Towley was always dry.

Coaches Drive Local Elevens Under Torrid Sun for Opening Games Saturday

Hatchet Team Too 'Smug,' Is Plaint

Pixlee Considers Shake-Up to End Complacency of First String.

STARTLED by the bugaboo of powerful opponents invading for the opening games of the year, District coaches drove their charges in long and grueling workouts yesterday.

Fairly bursting with favorable press reports from Philadelphia concerning La Salle, "Dutch" Bergman bent to the task of preparing Catholic U. for anything Marty Brill's eleven may spring. La Salle has no freshman rule, and the C. U. mentor is wary lest Brill slip a couple of aces into the deck.

Line-up Announced.

Catholic's line-up for the inaugural will see Augusterfer, quarter back; Oliver and Gearty, half backs; Jankowski, full back; Ball and Fleming, ends; Gross and Nally, tackles; Jim Lyons and Conter, guards, and White center.

This veteran array of talent figures to stop the Quakers without undue exertion, but as C. U. will save the best part of its repertoire for Holy Cross, La Salle may make it decidedly uncomfortable.

Having witnessed Catawba in action against North Carolina and placed his stamp of disapproval on its excellent performance, Jim Pixlee yesterday shuffled his G. W. U. squad in an effort to bolster weak spots. Bill Wright replaced "Red" Rathjen at center, and Sid Kolker, a local boy, stepped into Harry Deming's boots at right tackle.

On paper G. W. figures to hand the Southerners a neat lacing, but as some one remarked, "This game will be played on the field, not on paper."

Catawba Tricky.

Catawba employs an unorthodox style of play, one that will require a plentiful amount of experience to stop. It has a fine passing attack and a better-than-average line. To meet this threat, Pixlee is considering more replacements on the first team unless the men shake off their complacent air.

Squirming away from would-be tacklers and bouncing off-tackle for consistent gains, "Tuffy" Leemans caught the eyes of the coaches yesterday. It will be no great surprise if he muscles into the starting line-up.

Georgetown's almost unbelievable improvement is reflected in the optimistic attitude of Coach Jack Hagerty. The Blue and Gray linemen charged and tackled with all the fervor, and some of the skill, of G. U. teams of old. More coordination in the back field and an improved brand of blocking further heartened the Mentors.

Hard to Pick Best.

Although working with a limited supply of material, Hagerty is finding it difficult to select the most capable men. No starting line-up has been nominated for the Mount St. Mary's scuffle, nor will be until later in the week.

Maryland's boards of strategy emerged from its huddle yesterday with blueprints for strengthening its almost all-sophomore eleven. Seven second-year men are on the first team, and lack of experience looms as the principal obstacle blocking the pathway to a winning season. Blocking is sadly amiss, and this point was stressed in the workout.

Another scrimmage with C. U. is scheduled today at College Park. The remaining days before St. John's descends on Byrd Stadium will be devoted to polishing.

Series to Offer Chance for Hero

stand out all over the Giants. Almost overlooked in left field is Joe Moore, a ball hawk, and the quiet type that delivers in a pinch. There's a sensational candidate in Travis Jackson, filling in at third base for Johnny Vergez, a great shortstop until knee injuries and operations threatened to make this his last year in the majors. Behind the plate sturdy Gus Mancuso, the big reason behind Terry's great pitching staff, may go wild suddenly on a hitting spree.

The Nat's line-up, on the other hand, gleams with logical contenders for the hero's role. There's Goose Goslin, the outfield veteran who hit three homers for the Nats against the Giants in 1924 and three more against the Pirates in 1925. Older now, slowed down some at bat and afield, the Goose may fly high again in the excitement of the big battle.

Cronin a Certainty.

Joe Cronin, best shortstop in the majors, an aggressive leader who carries his managerial burdens lightly, is a certainty to be close to the top. Heinie Manush, hitting .332, fighting for everything in sight, will be a desperate fellow to keep down.

If no hero develops there, where the hitters lurk, then the pitchers will provide one from a list that fairly gleams with promise. Carl Hubbell, Earl Whitehill, Hal Schumacher, Al Crowder, Freddy Fitzsimmons, Wally Stewart, Jack Russell and Adolfo Luque.

Fort Worth Beaten.

Koshover Wins Decision Over Wright

Greater Experience Tells in Long Run in Fort Feature.

CAREY WRIGHT had everything it takes to beat Maxie Koshover in their 8-round main bout at Fort Washington last night, but he didn't know how to use it. So Koshover took a unanimous, but close decision before some 500 people after a gruelling bout, in which he conceded weight, height, reach, punch—and fighting heart.

Koshover back-pedaled through the first and second rounds to take them by narrow margins. In the third, he dismounted from his velocipede occasionally, and climbed right back on again when he was greeted by a flurry of hard, short lefts and rights to the body. In the fourth round, Koshover connected with a well-timed left hook, followed by a hard right cross to the jaw that had Wright reeling and groggy at the bell.

Ring Experience Tells.

Koshover's superior boxing ability and experience gained him the fifth and sixth rounds by wide margins, but Wright was able to get in close several times to narrow his margin in the seventh. During all the action, Koshover resorted to reverse running whenever stung hard, and Wright was continually pursuing him around the ring.

In the final round, Koshover evidently decided to try for a knockout and disprove all rumors to the effect that he lacked a killer instinct. From the opening bell, he waded in and was met half-way. For the first time in the fight, he refrained from running from trouble and the round was a sizzler, with Wright having a slight shade. During this round, Koshover tried to holler "quits" several times by turning his back to his opponent and throwing his arms wide in a signal calling for intervention by the referee, but Wright plowed in relentlessly, to the great delight of the crowd.

In the fours, Doug Swetnam boxed out a nice win over Soldier Van Heusen, Bill Howell battered down Lu Jameson in the third and Young Doro went down from a powder-puff punch thrown by Joe Green 2 minutes and 45 seconds after the bout started.

Barry, Tunney Score In Asheville Ring

Asheville, N. C., Sept. 25 (AP).—Reds Barry, of Washington, D. C., won a ten-round decision over Frankie Simms, of Cleveland, Ohio, tonight in the feature fight of a boxing show. Barry weighed 199 pounds and Simms 212.

In the semifinal, Jack Tunney, 195, of Washington, won by a technical knockout over Jack O'Dowd, of Detroit, 190, when the latter failed to come out for the eighth round of a ten-rounder.

"Firpo" Hipps, of Charlotte, N. C., outpointed "Cowboy" Hughie Gray, of Ponca City, Okla., in a close eight-round battle. Hipps weighed 155 and Gray 158.

Fellows' Gridders Drill.

Candidates for Fellows' United Grid Team are requested to report for practice tonight at 7:30 o'clock on the Palisades Field. Joe Perron, former coach of the Palace A. C., is at the helm of the team.

Sewell, Mancuso Both Rated Highly; Noted as Timely Hitters.

(Herewith is the fourth of a series of articles comparing the rival positions in the coming 1933 world series.)

THE men in the iron masks who will be behind the plate for the Nats and the Giants in the world series earned their jobs by their clever defensive skill and in the presence of Luke Sewell and Gus Mancuso the contending clubs strike an unusually fine balance.

Their hitting prowess is nonimpressive when you look at the figures, with both Sewell and Mancuso hovering about the same .263 average, but they are a pair of pepper pots behind the plate and have cultivated an excellent knack of inserting their hits at the proper moments.

To Mancuso goes the bulk of the credit for developing the super-perfect pitching of the Giants' staff which escorted the New York Club to the pennant with the most sensational hurling witnessed in the major leagues in a decade.

No inconsiderable share of the honors goes to Mancuso for developing particularly the young Giant pitchers, Shumacher and Parmelee, who were uncontrollable wild men before the Giants' little catcher came along from the Cardinals this season and provided a steadying influence.

Mancuso, born in Galveston, Tex., of Italian parentage, has not always been a weak sister at bat, hitting .297 for three seasons with the Cardinals before he was bought to replace the giant Shanty Hogan, who had been released to the Braves. New York fans viewed with undiluted skepticism the acquisition of Mancuso, who had set no worlds on fire with the Cards. All season they have lavished their admiration upon him.

Ten years out of college and still baseball's foremost exponent of the old college spirit—that's Sewell behind the plate. On top of every pitch, on top of every ball, he is the possessor of an arm that Clark Griffith calls the best throwing arm in the league, but Mancuso will be testing his mettle in that respect for the little Giant's arm has also earned the unqualified respect of National League base runners.

Brought along from Cleveland in exchange for Roy Spencer last winter, Sewell, believed through by Cleveland fans and writers, gained a new lease on his baseball life with Washington and aside from his defensive play has bolstered the lower end of the batting order.

Team Golf Matches.

New York Huzza Over Giants Belated, Far Fetched, Is Claim

National League Winners Ignored as 2d Rate Most of Season.

By Westbrook Pegler.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (Spl.). New York has gone strangely hick-town over the Giants and their winning of the National League pennant, which certainly is no original feat, and, judging by the meager turnstile readings of the Polo Grounds over the course of the season, a matter of interest to only a trifling fraction of the city's six million and odd.

The mayor of the city, a Mr. O'Brien, has received the athletes with ruffles and flourishes reminiscent of the pomp with which his predecessor, Mr. Hylan, used to greet relays of whiskered moochers from the Old World on their way to Washington to pile up the war debt.

Mr. O'Brien in his oration to the persons unknown to him who are to glorify the city in the world series ball games at the Polo Grounds—or is it the Yankee Stadium, Mike?—managed to recall that he once managed the ball club in his days at college. From this he derived the right to call them brother.

There followed a parade in the rain, with marching-music, and there are likely to be other doings.

They burned no crates or barrels in the streets when, in 1921, the Yankees won their first pennant, after many years of patient striving.

That certainly was a more historic occasion, but the citizens took it with deplorable calm. Nor did they ever indulge in the same excited let-go over any of the winnings of John McGraw, within the scope of my experience; although Mr. McGraw was, and is, a New Yorker and more typical of New York than George M. Cohan, Mr. O'Brien, Jimmy Walker, or even Mr. Curry, himself, who owns the town.

Real Reason to Celebrate.

Mr. McGraw was one whose victories in the baseball business could have been fittingly observed with marching and dancing in the streets and fighting in the saloons without any affectation at all. But they never let him have it, and even when three years in a row both New York teams won pennants, there was a blase disposition to regard all this as nothing more than the good luck of a couple of show troupes.

It will puzzle some citizens to decide on a course of conduct now.

There are not many people who can claim at this time that they were with the Giants through thick and thin, as the phrase goes, and knew they had it in them all the time.

The Giants were well beyond June before they began to attract pay-loads of customers, and well into August before the patrons recognized them in large numbers. Those who stayed away in hordes until the Giants were coming down the stretch in front might feel shy about flocking to them now, lest they be accused of tagging along after a winner.

"Die Hards" Few.

Yet, if the Giants' firm were to rely solely on the patronage of the die-hard type of customer their world series would not enjoy that great success and gala atmosphere which Mr. O'Brien bespoke for it.

If the world series attendance were restricted to those who were for the Giants before the Fourth of July, the athletes would have only nickles to divide at the finish.

Appearance of Dressen in Giants' Line-Up May Affect Error Column in Post's Contest

Infielder Nats Will Allow to Play Has Splendid Record at Third.

YESTERDAY the Nationals gave the Giants permission to use an ineligible, Charley Dressen, at third base if they want to. To many, this looks like simply good sportsmanship on the part of the Washington Club. To others, though—many who have entered The Post's baseball contest—the addition of Dressen's name to the Giants' roster may mean a lot of woe.

These—and they are in the majority among the thousands who have entered the contest—have guessed the Nats will make fewer errors than their foe in the opening world series game.

In rating the Nats stronger defensively, fans undoubtedly figured that, with Johnny Vergez, the National Leaguer's regular third-sacker, out of action because of a recent appendicitis operation, the veteran shortstop, Travis Jackson, would not go so well in a new berth.

Dressen has made but one error in 31 chances since joining the Giants, and, if he is used, he may upset the dope of those figuring a third-base fielding weakness. Of course, on the other hand, he may prove a flop. That's one of the features of The Post contest—there are so many elements of luck to be considered.

The contest closes Saturday night. If fans have any theories or hunches they are urged not to delay sending them in to The Post. The more, the merrier.

The popularity of The Post's contest is attested by the great stacks of mail received from fans seeking the nine box seats that The Post will distribute free to the first, second and third-place winners for the closest prediction as to the outcome of the opening game at the Polo Grounds October 3.

Cuban 'Revolt' To Hit Twin City Ring

Pearl of Antilles Fighters to Advance on Italy in 8-Round Bouts.

PEPPERY Latin temperaments are scheduled to flare up in two of the three eight-rounders heading the Twin City "club fight" card Wednesday, when Tony Lopez engages Mickey Genaro, and Joe Gauzman appears with Jimmy Tramberia. Lopez is a Cuban, as is his stablemate, Gauzman. Genaro and Tramberia are Italians.

The Cuban faction holds the upper hand, in the opinion of most close followers of the feature-scrambling industry. Lopez is possessed of a lethal right hand and enough speed to bewilder the ordinary opponent. His Italian rival, Genaro, though still peppy, has seen better days.

Gauzman, while not on a par with his teammate, is not faced with the same opposition. Tramberia, once a very good little fighter, has little left but weaving and ducking—last resort of a slipping fighter. Their match is not expected to prove anything.

Rassling Card For Thursday Completed

THURSDAY night's rassle program was completed last night when Promoter Joe Turner signed six grunt and grimance artists to fill out the card which cofeatures George Zaharias and Jim McMillan and Everett Marshall and Doc Karl Sarpolis. This sextet has been paired in half-hour fracases as follows: Tom Alley vs. Milo Steinborn, Cliff (Swede) Olsen vs. Karl Davis and Floyd Marshall vs. Jacques Humberto.

This addition promises a well-rounded program, with a punch—in fact, many of them—due in every bout. Probably most interest in the preliminaries will be shown in the Olsen-Davis affair. Both are young and aggressive lads who go about their work as though they like it. Steinborn figures to have no trouble handling Alley, while F. Marshall, with his rough tactics, should get the fans' hissers in fine shape for the Zaharias bout.

Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, defending titleholder, and Miss Bertha Israel, tied for first prize with 18-hole scores of 99, each, in the qualifying round of the Woodmont Country Club women's championship yesterday.

First round matches in the championship flight of eight will begin today with the following slated for action:

10:00—Mrs. Bertha Israel vs. Helen Goldenberg; 10:05—Mrs. Gilbert Hahn vs. Mrs. L. B. Schloss; 10:10—Mrs. Frances Shulman vs. Mrs. Treodore Peyser; 10:15—Mrs. Louise Baum vs. Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith.

Only three matches were played yesterday in the first round of the President's Cup tournament at Chevy Chase.

George Elliott defeated R. P. Whitley, 4 and 3; Dr. W. B. Mason trimmed D. D. L. McGrew, 5 and 4, and Frank Reeside won from V. R. Alfaro, 5 and 3.

Mrs. J. F. Dowdall of Congressional, decisioned Mrs. Donald Scott, of Indian Spring, by three strokes yesterday in the play-off for the low gross prize in the Corby Cup tournament. Mrs. Dowdall scored 49—45—94, while Mrs. Scott registered 49—48—97. They tied in the event at Columbia last week.

Mrs. C. P. Medley won first low net prize yesterday in the "open day" tournament held at Indian Spring in conjunction with the executive board meeting of the District of Columbia Women's Golf Association. Mrs. Medley had a 92—14—78. Second low net went to Mrs. K. S. Wright, of Indian Spring, with 120—35—85.

Mrs. W. Beller, of Columbia, and Mrs. Harrison Brand tied for low gross with 92 each, but the former won in the draw. The putting contest went to Mrs. R. C. Dunbar, who took 38 putts for 18 holes to win the prize donated by Mrs. George Diffenbaugh.

"Cap" Stubbs — Is That All! — By Edwina

Walt Mason, Himself

Too Much Carnage.

I've grown weary of the story dealing with the sleuth and crime. It's become so red and gory in this jazzy modern time. One good murder was a-plenty in detective tales of yore, now we have some 12 or 20 dead men lying on the floor. Conan Doyle in mercy spared us all the sickening details, and he seldom shocked or scared us with a lot of blood in pails. If a dead man was essential, he would bring one in with smiles, then his yarn grew evidential, treating of great Sherlock's wiles. And the people of his stories were not of the baser kind, often they had social glories, they had charms of heart and mind. Sherlock didn't go forth gunning for cheap pikers in the marts, but, exerting all his cunning, won the game by master arts. Now the sleuth is always shooting, shedding blood by night and day, sending corpses cally-hooting to the morgue across the way. And the gents he is pursuing do their part with tommy-guns; they are always up and doing, killing people, tons on tons. And the book is full of curses, oaths are sprung by all the crowds, every chapter has its hearses and some novelties in shrouds. Once I loved sleuth stories vastly, and I read them all the time, but they have become too ghastly, showing all that's gross in crime.

Repeal Rally Plans Voted In Alexandria

Young Democrats Add Charles O. Pickett to Speaker List.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
607 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Charles O. Pickett, of Fairfax, repeal chairman for the Eighth Congressional District of Virginia, has been added to the list of speakers at the rally to be held by the Young Democrats of Alexandria Thursday night in the armory. Pickett, candidate for delegate on the ticket to be voted on October 3, will speak on the liquor control plan proposed to supplant the present dry laws.

Jouett Shouse, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and former chairman of the Democratic national committee, will be the principal speaker. Plans provide for a torchlight parade, headed by the Alexandria Citizens Band, before the rally. The committee chairmen appointed to distribute informative ballots received their final instructions.

Invitations to attend the rally have been extended to Postmaster General James Farley, Senators Carter Glass and Harry Flood Byrd and George C. Peery, Democratic nominee for governor of Virginia.

A special invitation for women to participate in the rally was issued yesterday.

Woman Sentenced.

In the Corporation Court of Alexandria yesterday, Judge William P. Wools presiding, Mabel L. Taylor, colored, indicted for attempted larceny of two diamond rings, valued at $1,360, from Mrs. Jessie G. Eig, was given a suspended sentence of one year in the penitentiary, the suspension to apply only during good behavior.

Albert Shiflett, indicted for breaking and entering the home of A. L. Stack, was sentenced to six months in jail.

Dollar Bill Mailed.

A one-dollar bill, attached with ordinary twine to a shipping tag, bearing a 2-cent postage stamp, was mailed recently by C. Raymond Hellmuth, of 801 King street, Alexandria, to his son, C. H. Hellmuth, Margate, N. J., and was received promptly and safely. The note is now on exhibition at Mr. Hellmuth's place of business.

School Cost $242,593.

The cost of operating the public schools of Alexandria for the session ended July 1, 1933, was $242,593.69, of which amount the City of Alexandria paid $176,335.75, and the State of Virginia, $40,129.74, according to the annual report of school expenses just submitted to the Alexandria City Council.

The amount expended for instruction of day students was $168,064.14.

Jeremiah Crilly Dies.

Another Also Accused in Attack on Trade Photographer.

Warrants charging assault with intent to kill Stuart Miller, 45, commercial photographer, of Cottage City, Md., will be issued for a District policeman, his brother, and a Washington dentist, police said yesterday.

Miller received a fracture of the jaw, severe contusions and lacerations at the hands of the three, it is charged, early Sunday. The assault occurred in the rear of a garage belonging to R. A. Bob, Cottage City chief of police.

From his bed at Sibley Hospital the photographer told police a revolver was thrust at his back when he attempted to investigate a disturbance. He then was felled with a blackjack.

Although stunned, Miller said he drew a revolver and fired. His shot went wild and he was immediately overpowered. With the arrival of Chief Bob, the men fled.

Fairfax Democrats Urged to Vote Wet

James King, president of the Young Democrats Club of Fairfax County, Va., in a letter to all members, urges them to take part in the repeal election next Tuesday. He cites previous action by the club asking that the eighteenth amendment and the Virginia prohibition laws be repealed.

The regular meeting of the club, scheduled for Thursday night in the county courthouse, has been postponed until October 6. A joint meeting of the Fairfax and Alexandria clubs will be held Thursday evening in the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria.

$2,500,000 Advance Near For Arlington

State Committee Sends Recommendations to Washington.

BUREAU OF THE POST,
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Word was received yesterday that the State advisory committee had acted on Arlington County's application for $2,500,000 under the industrial recovery act for installation of sewers and had forwarded its recommendation to Washington. County officials were heartened by the quick action.

Should the loan be approved this week, County Manager Roy S. Braden said no time would be lost by the county board in asking Judge Walter T. McCarthy to set a date for the special election on the bond issue.

In the meantime, six field parties are busy making a county survey for the sewer system. The work is being done under the supervision of Allen B. McDaniel, sanitary engineer.

Action by the Public Works Administration is also expected shortly on the $50,000 loan asked by Fairfax County for the construction of a new county jail.

More than 200 members of the parish and friends attended the house warming program at the new Parish Hall of St. George's Episcopal Church last night. Following a basket supper, a musical program was given.

Postoffice Sought.

A resolution, suggesting a campaign to educate residents of Arlington County with the necessity of a central postoffice, was adopted at a meeting of the postoffice committee of the chamber of commerce at a meeting in Clarendon last night.

Walter Hugh Varney, president of the chamber of commerce, reported that Representative Howard Smith would cooperate in the movement if there was sufficient public sentiment. He suggested a survey.

Road Plan Opposed.

Determined to carry on a fight against Arlington County going into the Byrd road plan, a meeting has been called for tonight in the Moose Hall at Clarendon. It is proposed to form an organization to inform the voters on what is claimed to be many disadvantages in allowing the State to take over the entire county road system.

Forman to Be Honored.

Past Commander Robert H. Forman, of Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, will be presented with a legion commander's medal tomorrow night at Clarendon. The presentation will be made by Rice W. Means, commander of the District of Columbia Department.

Flood Committee Leaders Selected

The committee on the flood situation, meeting in Bladensburg last night, named Judge Alfred Bailey permanent chairman of the flood committee, and Wilbur Eakite, Tuxedo, permanent secretary.

A committee of five will present petitions to Congressman Gambrill, it was determined. Jeremiah Hawkins, North Brentwood; Dr. Robert McCullough, Edmonston District, and W. R. Beatty, of Bladensburg, were named to this committee. Two others are to be appointed.

Plans for flood control include dredging the channel from the District line to the Northeast branch.

Foes of Ferry Present Brief Against Loan

Engineers' Traffic Count and Distance Gauge Attacked.

A final argument against a loan of $425,000 from the Public Works Administration to the Chesapeake Beach Railway Co. for a new ferry service across Chesapeake Bay was filed yesterday by attorneys for the Annapolis-Claiborne Ferry Co.

The last-minute brief constitutes a reply to traffic surveys by the Federal Bridge Co. and Gelm, Oyen & Philbin, traffic engineers, whose findings on volume of traffic across the bay were presented at a final hearing on the loan application last week before the technical board of review of the Public Works Administration.

The attorneys charge statements of the traffic experts are erroneous. The distance to be traversed by the applicant company is 2 miles farther than is claimed, and the amount of traffic estimated for the proposed service is exaggerated, the brief states.

Philip B. Perlman, attorney for the Claiborne-Annapolis Co., also served notice that efforts will be made to have the new company placed under the jurisdiction of the Maryland Public Service Commission. Jonathan C. Gibson, counsel for the Chesapeake Beach Co., states that operation under the Interstate Commerce Commission is sufficient, as the United States Supreme Court has ruled that extension of the railway company comes under jurisdiction of the I. C. C.

A recommendation on whether the loan should be granted will be made by the technical board of review within the next few days.

Prince Georges NRA Committee Named

A canvass of 300 business men in Prince Georges County showed 90 per cent signed NRA pledges, it was reported last night at a Hyattsville meeting.

J. T. Norman, Hyattsville; DeWilton H. Donaldson, Laurel; D. Hazen McCloud, Edmonson; C. H. Gilbert, Upper Marlboro; C. J. Outten, Brandywine; Stephen Pribula, Mount Rainier, and Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, College Park.

Barrett Freed In 2-Year-Old Assault Case

Rover Dismisses Charges After Two Attempts to Convict Sleuth.

Prosecution of Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett on a charge of assault made two years ago during investigation of "third degree" practices in the Police Department was dropped yesterday by District Attorney Leo A. Rover.

After two unsuccessful attempts to convict the homicide squad detective, the district attorney nolle prossed the charge. Barrett has been under suspension two years.

He was charged with having struck George M. Baber in the Marne Apartment, 2400 Thirteenth street northwest, the night of April 6, 1931. Barrett was attempting to arrest Baber as a suspect in the killing of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes during a hold-up in the Garden T Shoppe. Baber was cleared.

Barrett was convicted in December, 1931, and the conviction was set aside on appeal. He was retried five months ago and the jury failed to bring in a verdict.

Barrett is regarded by Chief of Detectives Franck S. W. Burke as one "of the ablest investigators in the detective bureau." It was not known last night whether he would be immediately reinstated or face trial board action.

Antiwar Delegates to Get Big "Send-Off"

A mass "send-off" for 25 Washington delegates to the United States Congress Against War, which convenes in New York, September 29, will be held in the Friends Meeting House at 1811 I street northwest, tomorrow night. The congress, supported by more than 45 national organizations, was called by Sherwood Anderson, Theodore Dreiser and Upton Sinclair.

The meeting will be under auspices of the Washington provisional committee for the congress. Members of the committee include Mauritz Hallgren, associate editor of The Nation; Robert W. Horton, of the Washington Daily News; Prof. Sterling Brown, of Howard University; Dorothy Detzer, of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, and Gardner Jackson, newspaper correspondent. Dr. D. N. Shoemaker, of the American Friends service committee, also a member of the provisional committee, will act as chairman.

Civic Group Lauds King, Mrs. Norton

Work of Senator William H. King and Representative Mary T. Norton in District affairs was commended last night in a resolution adopted by the Mid-City Citizens Association meeting in Thomson School. A committee was appointed to present the resolution.

The association adopted a resolution congratulating President Clark Griffith and Manager Joe Cronin on the Nationals' pennant success. Cooperation with the civic Halloween celebration October 31 also was voted. A. J. Driscoll, president, was chairman.

Man Found Hanged With Clothesline

Thomas W. Selby Dies at Cousin's Home.

Suspended from a rafter by a clothesline, Thomas W. Selby, 67, was found dead yesterday at the home of his cousin, William M. Mobley, near Beltsville, Md.

Selby, a retired Montgomery County farmer, had apparently padded the rope with paper before tying it about his neck. The body was discovered by Mrs. John George in a tenement house adjoining the Mobley home.

A coroner's jury said Selby came to his death by strangulation at his own hands. He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Mamie Gauley, Derwood, Md., and Mrs. Kate Mobley, Gaithersburg, Md.

Gas Holder Urged For Chillum Site

Hyattsville Body Votes Approval of Project.

The Hyattsville Chamber of Commerce last night voted to approve the erection of a gas holder at Chillum, Md.

"An investigation," the adopted resolution read, "shows the proposed site to be on marginal land. No gas manufacturing plant is contemplated." Hyattsville is 3 miles from Chillum.

Mount Rainier, approximately one mile from the proposed site, indicated its disapproval of the project last week. The town council voted to fight the action of the Prince Georges Gas Corporation.

The chamber of commerce also took steps last night to change its name to "The Chamber of Commerce of Prince Georges County." It was decided to vote on the change at the November meeting.

No Corpse

Police Find Murder Call Just False Alarm.

Three squads of police responding to a murder call at the New Amsterdam Apartments, 2701 Fourteenth street northwest last night, found a mystery to solve, but no murder.

Corpus delicti there was none, and no one would admit placing the call.

Lord Baltimore Land Faces Sale First Time Since 1794

Judges Appeal For New D. C. Court Building

Economy Committee Hears Plea in Last Budget Session Today.

Police, Juvenile and Municipal Court judges will make a plea for a new courts building at the final session of the District economy committee at 2 p. m. today.

The committee today will complete its work of putting together the 1935 District budget estimates.

Need for a structure to house the courts long has been advocated. They now are scattered in three buildings, all of which are antiquated.

The budget, calling for expenditures of $36,710,000, will be presented to the District Commissioners tomorrow or Thursday.

Eight Are Posted As Among Missing

"Lookouts" were posted for Albert W. ## Judge Befriends Horseshoe Pitchers

Asserting that "the police have more to do than arrest horseshoe pitchers," Police Court Judge Ralph Given yesterday took the personal bond of Frank B. Johnson, 30, 700 block Taylor street, and Rose Grant, 29, also of 700 block Taylor street, who had been arrested by a park policeman for obstructing a bridal path in Rock Creek Park by their game.

Rose Show October 13 At National Museum

A silver cup and one silver and two bronze medals will be presented to winning entries.

Last Two Acres of Tract Site of Queen Family Burying Ground.

Two acres of land on Queens Chapel road, back of Brookland, are up for sale, the first time since 1794.

Known and unknown heirs of Richard Queen were ordered yesterday by the District Supreme Court to appear as defendants and show cause why this historic land should not be sold.

The property is held by the Right Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, as trustee. In the original deed, made in October, 1794, it was stipulated the land be used solely for religious purposes.

Came From England.

Richard Queen, who gave the land to the church, came from England with the first settlers of Maryland.

Conforming to the donor's request, a Catholic church was erected on the site, which still holds the old Queen family graveyard—with tombstones dating back to the eighteenth century.

As for the old chapel, modern life darkened its doors years ago. It stands a silent memorial to a vanished congregation. It was known for years as St. Francis de Sales' Catholic Church. Later, it gave way to a new edifice erected on the corner of Rhode Island and Mills avenues northeast at a cost of $90,000.

This new edifice, a magnificent contrast to the aged and dilapidated old one-room chapel hidden in the remoteness of Queens Chapel road amply cares for a congregation demanding high speed transportation.

Buyer in Prospect.

So the archbishop of Baltimore wishes to sell the original old chapel and its quiet landscape, two acres in extent.

There is a buyer: The National Lutheran Home for the Aged. The price, too, has been fixed: $8,500.

It is quiet out there on the old Queen's Chapel road, far off the beaten paths, away from traffic and noises of the city, and the old folks would enjoy it, so the archbishop and the contemplated purchasers believe.

William C. Sullivan, attorney for the Archdiocese of Baltimore, has filed all the papers.

Nothing remains to block the sale except for some heir of Richard Queen to step in and prove a claim. It is an outside chance, of course, for most of the old family lie buried back of the old Queens Chapel road—about Seventeenth and Evarts streets northeast, a plot that was once part of the original Baltimore grant.

Women Urge Uniform U. S. Furlough Plan

Appeal to President to Stop Dismissal of Married Workers.

The National Woman's Party last night called upon President Roosevelt to promulgate uniform furlough regulations for every government department.

In a letter, Florence Bayard Hilles, national chairman of the woman's organization, declared such action might curtail "the widespread dismissal of married women."

Mrs. Hilles charged the absence of uniform furlough regulations is working hardships. She charged that government officials are acting contrary to the President's employment program, and pointed to the dismissal of married workers from the War and Postoffice Departments.

"We are respectfully suggesting that you ask Civil Service Commission to assist you in preparing such rules and regulations." She asked for an appointment with the President to present her case.

Women to Visit Famous Gardens

300 Plan Picnic Lunch at Lee Birthplace.

More than 300 women are expected at the picnic lunch tomorrow at Stratford Hall, Va., when members of the Garden Club of Virginia will inspect the gardens of the plantation which was the home of two signers of the Declaration of Independence and the birthplace of Robert E. Lee.

The restoration of the gardens, the work of the club, has been carried on for the last three years. Mrs. Lawrence S. Davis is the president of the organization.

Thomas Rives Seen as New D. C. Jail Head

Expert on Rehabilitation Believed in Line for Post.

Thomas M. Rives, Federal rehabilitation expert, is expected to be appointed today as superintendent of the District Jail.

The post has been vacant since Col. William L. Peak, jail superintendent, was promoted September 1. He succeeded A. C. Tawse as head of the Lorton Reformatory when Tawse was removed.

While there are a half a dozen candidates, it is generally believed the welfare board will choose Rives.

The post pays $3,800 a year with annual increases until a maximum of $4,400 is reached.

Board officials were anxious to have the new superintendent in charge when 10 prisoners in "death row" are executed next month.

Reception Will Honor Mrs. Robbins Gilman

An informal reception for Mrs. Robbins Gilman, Minneapolis, chairman of the Federal Motion Picture Council, will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in the parlors of the Calvary Baptist Church. Persons interested in "cleaning up the movies" are to participate.

Blind Poet Begins University Career

G. W. Reid Matriculates as Howard Student.

George W. Reid, blind Dunbar honor student, who was awarded a $150 tuition scholarship by Howard University, and a $400 scholarship by the education department of colored Elks, completed registration to enter college yesterday.

He was attended regularly in his high school classes by a boy classmate, while a girl student visited his home each afternoon and read assignments to him, making such notes as he directed. He dictated exercises in mathematics to her, but used the typewriter expertly in preparing English, history, composition and language exercises.

Similar arrangements will be made, through friends, for his progress through the university. While at Dunbar he wrote several poems, which were praised by school authorities.

Judges Selected For Horse Show

Robert Quinter Will Act as Ringmaster.

Judges for the charity horse show of the Montgomery County Social Service League were selected at a meeting of the general committee last night in the Bethesda County Building.

Otto Furr and Louis Leith of Middleburg, Va., and Dion Kerr, of Chevy Chase, Md., were selected as judges. Robert Quinter, of Washington, will be ringmaster and Frank Jenkins, of Washington, will be assistant ringmaster. Mrs. J. Banks Berry, of Rockville, is entry clerk and Irwin Ray, of Chevy Chase, is chief marshal.

The show will be given Saturday on the Ray estate, East West Highway and Rock Creek. Sixteen classes have been provided, four for ponies, twelve for horses.

Junior High School Finished in Few Days

It already is being prepared for occupancy, Maj. Gotwals said.

Wounded Pigeon Found in Cab

Peter Malevitis, restaurateur, 310 Tenth street northwest, found a wounded pigeon on the floor of an empty taxicab at Tenth and D streets northwest last night—and now he wants to find its owner. The gray and white carrier, from the back of which the feathers have been partially scraped, wears a band, bearing the inscription BHc692-if-33. Miss Margaret Higgins is shown holding the bird.

Stewart Asks Wagner's Help In Labor Row

A. F. L. Council to Take Up Action in One Dispute Here.

Assistance of Senator Robert F. Wagner, New York, in settling the labor dispute which has stopped all work on the Interstate and Commerce Buildings since September 15, was sought yesterday.

James Stewart, head of the contracting company bearing his name, which is putting up the interconnected structures, made a flying trip here from New York to enlist Wagner's aid. The two are personal friends.

A. F. L. Considers Fight.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor building trades department met yesterday to consider the fight between boilermakers and ironworkers over smokestacks at the Central Heating Plant. No action was taken pending arrival today of P. J. Morrin, international president of organized ironworkers.

Officials of the Rust Engineering Co., contractors for the heating plant, indicated a total shutdown would be imperative if an agreement was not reached between the conflicting trades within two weeks. Boilmakers began a protest strike two weeks ago. Caulking around window frames also is at a standstill, both ironworkers and bricklayers claiming the work.

No Disorders in Disputes.

Carpenters at the I. C. C.-Labor buildings walked out September 1 and two weeks later all operations were suspended, contractors contending further progress was contingent upon completion of necessary carpentry work. There have been no disorders in any of the three controversies.

The building trades executive council will act only on the ironworker-boilermaker dispute because bricklayers and carpenters are not affiliated with the department. All three issues, however, will be taken up today by the National Board of Trade Claims.

Representative Runs Afoul Law at Home

From the Pocatello (Idaho) Tribune:

"Representative T. C. Coffin may be immune from arrest while on duty in Washington, D. C., but to the home town 'coppers' he looks like any other citizen. Mr. Coffin forfeited a $1 bond in police court today (September 20) on an overtime parking charge."

Representatives and senators are immune to arrest while en route to and from and while in Washington.

Court Action Near in Fight To Open Bank

Cooper Seeks to Operate U. S. Savings Firm on Own Plan.

Determined to reopen the United States Savings Bank on his own plan, Col. Wade H. Cooper, president, said last night he planned to start court action for permission.

His announcement followed his refusal of the alternative proposal of Gibbs Lyons, deputy comptroller of currency. In a letter declining the counter proposal, Cooper's counsel explained his plan. It provides that depositors receive 65 per cent on reopening and the balance be guaranteed by trusteeing certain assets and adding to the trust fund dividends declared on bank stock.

The letter stated Lyon's proposal that a portion of this money be put up at this time and stockholders be released of further responsibility was not in accord with Cooper's desire that depositors be paid in full.

Replying to Cooper's counsel last night Lyons explained whether depositors receive 65 per cent at the outset depends on the outcome of a reexamination of assets in process and whether the bank would be sufficiently liquid to release that portion of them now.

He stated the balance could not be guaranteed under Cooper's plan as there is no certainty what future value the stock would have or whether the bank would make any profits.

"It appears the stock has no value now and the bank operated at a loss in 1931 and 1932," he added.

President's Aid Asked In Educational Work

Aid of President Roosevelt in awakening public consciousness to the difficulties faced by education was asked yesterday by Mrs. Hugh Bradford, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

In a letter to the President, Mrs. Bradford asserted that the Government "has spent millions to stamp out illiteracy and we are again facing situations in many of our States which threaten a return of similar educational situations." She asked the President for a public expression on the needs of education.

Streets for Skaters Discussed at Meeting

Plans to rope off streets for roller skating at specified hours were discussed by the North Capitol Citizens Association at McKinley High School last night.

Colpoys Slated To Get District Marshal Post

National Committeeman, Labor Organ Publisher, Goes in Next April.

John B. Colpoys, Democratic national committeeman of Washington and publisher of the Trades Unionist, labor organ, will be appointed United States marshal for the District, it was learned last night. He is expected to take office in April, 1934.

Leaders of the local Democratic organization, including John F. Costello, the other national committeeman, are understood to have received assurances in high patronage quarters that Colpoys will be named by President Roosevelt to succeed Marshal Edgar C. Snyder when his term expires April 22.

Large Political Plum.

Selection of Colpoys will remove him from consideration for District Commissioner, a post with which his name has been linked, but to which his friends insist he never has aspired.

The office of marshal is one of the outstanding political plums to be plucked by local Democrats. While the salary of $7,500 annually, less a 15 per cent cut, is not large as compared with that of certain other officials, the marshal has sole authority to pick his 115 assistants.

Included are clerks and deputies assigned to the District Supreme, Police, Municipal and Juvenile Courts. Salaries of the deputies range upward from $1,620 a year, minus 15 per cent.

Office Considered Model.

Marshals from all parts of the country frequently inspect the local office, considered a model of efficiency. The marshal figures in an enormous number of cases each year. A total of 157,007 writs were served by deputies last year.

Colpoys has been a labor leader since he came to Washington from Boston 30 years ago. He has been a delegate to every national convention of his party since 1912. Appointed by President Wilson, he served several years as a Labor Department conciliator. He also is a former recorder of deeds here.

Snyder soon will complete his third four-year term. Before he became marshal he was Washington correspondent of the Omaha Bee.

Postoffice Veteran Hurt; Driver Arrested

A possible fracture of the skull and lacerations of his forehead were suffered yesterday morning by David L. Garvey, 69, 1370 Irving street northwest, veteran Postoffice Department employe, when he was struck by the automobile of a hit-and-run driver at Irving and Fourteenth streets northwest. Garvey was crossing the street at the time of the accident.

Ousted Clerks Hit Patronage Policy

Civil Service Ignored, Say Former Federal Workers.

Charging that the Civil Service system had been disregarded in filling positions in new Government agencies, a group of dismissed Federal workers met at the Arlington Hotel last night in an effort to organize sentiment for reinstatement.

Directed by Mrs. Agnes Franks, formerly with the Department of Agriculture, the group adopted a series of resolutions designed to combat the "recent reintroduction of patronage within the Government service."
